ABM Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has already sunk $3 billion into an ABM system that is not much more than a few holes in the ground.

President Nixon announced Thursday that the system, which is to be built in stages, will be aimed at reducing the threat of Soviet missiles on a global scale, but no showdown in construction is at hand in Montana, North Dakota and Missouri is expected until such an agreement becomes a reality.

With the current timetable, the first Safeguard ABM site at Nebraska, N.D., near Grand Forks Air Force Base, is not due to be ready until the fall of 1974.

The complicated trading order for the Spartan missile already has passed nearly a dozen tests in experimental launches over a research range in the Pacific Ocean.

But actual construction has been limited to the underground missile site in North Dakota, which are now about half finished, and a start on the computer radar buildings.

Work at the second site north of Great Falls, Mont., has been blocked by an over-run in construction bids, which came in too high to be accepted last month. The government is trying to renegotiate the bids.

The total cost of the ABM system already has rocketed from a $10.3 billion pricing for 12 sites planned two years ago to a minimum of $9 billion for just four sites now.

If a nationwide shield of 12 sites should ever be approved, the Pentagon now figures the full cost would be nearly $15 billion—up by $5 per site in just two years.

Inflation in construction costs and the price of beefing up the defenses are blamed.

The Safeguard system is meant to guard the nation's Minuteman offensive missiles at Grand Forks, Great Falls and Whiteman Air Force Bases, Mo.

Twice the Nixon program has survived cliff-hanger votes in the Senate, getting a 51-49 reprieve two years ago and winning 52-45 last year.

The Pentagon has been given $2.7 billion so far. It says it had either spent or committed $2.1 billion of this through the end of February.

Most of the money so far has gone for research, testing and advance buying of complicated radar and computer parts.

The Pentagon is asking Congress for another $1.3 billion for the new fiscal year starting in July.

Russia already has a defensive net around Moscow, according to the Pentagon, and a similar shield for Washington is considered a possibility by late 1977.

McGovern Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George E. McGovern challenged fellow Democrats Sen. Edward S. Brooke and Hiram B. Humphrey Thursday to specify how they would shift national priorities in view of their refusal to support a 50 percent cut in U.S. troops in Europe.

"If they're not willing to put expenditures there for the military," McGovern asked at a news conference, "where are they willing to cut?"

The South Dakota Democrat, only announced candidate for his party's 1972 presidential nomination, said that unless specific cuts are made in the $6-billion defense budget, the talk about changing priorities is "just rhetoric."

He said that the votes by Brooke and Humphrey against the amendment by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield were "a serious blow to any credibility they have with regard to a serious change in priorities."

The 61-35 vote Wednesday against the Mansfield amendment, McGovern said, "shows that a lot of people are still hung up on these same outmoded foreign policy assumptions that got us into Indochina."

Asked if that included Brooke and Humphrey, potential rivals in his campaign for the presidency, McGovern said, "Yes, it does. They're involved in those assumptions."

McGovern called the news conference to announce three appointments in his presidential campaign. They are:

—Frank Mankiewicz, 47, press secretary for the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, a 1968 McGovern adviser and now a syndicated columnist and television commentator, to a major over-all policy position, without specific title, in the campaign.

—Jeff Grubbs, 32, on leave from Columbia Broadcasting System where he has been a producer, as press secretary.

—Gordon L. Wolf, 34, who has been press secretary and legislative assistant, as executive assistant to McGovern with over-all charge of his legislative program and coordinator of issues.

Helicopter Mishap

LONDON (AP) — Dennis Lee Royle, Associated Press photographer whose camera captured some of the great news pictures of the past years, perished in a helicopter crash Thursday while covering a naval exercise in the English Channel.

Two other cameramen, Edward Bear, 35, of the British Press Association, and Guy Burchard, 35, a freelance working for the American Broadcasting Co., also died when the low-flying Royal Navy helicopter plunged into the sea. All the bodies were recovered by helicopters and warships taking part in the NATO training exercise.

Two other photographers and the two-man helicopter crew were rescued.

One of the survivors, Roy A. Leithy, 35, a cameraman for United Press International, speaking with difficulty because of facial injuries, said: "We were flying pretty low to get a good view of the NATO ships when we suddenly dropped like a stone."

"I heard the engine cut and the next thing I knew we were in the sea. We were under water and I must have swallowed gallons and gallons."

"I remember trying to find a way out, but how I did it I don't know. The next thing I was waking up in bed on a ship."

Royle, 36, had faced danger conditions in wars in Africa and the East. He died on the last of assignments which he would have regarded as little more than a pleasant day out.

In 25 years with The Associated Press he was one of the world's most traveled photographers.

In April 1966, Royle was on the spot at a South African country showground when a would-be assassin fired two bullets into Prime Minister Biko Vorster.

U.S.-Soviet Stalemate Broken

Vital Arms Move Disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon announced Thursday what he termed a major step in breaking the stalemate on nuclear arms talks between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Nixon went on nationwide radio-televised at noon to read a brief statement about the long-stalled U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT), timed with a similar statement issued in Moscow.

The President said that as a result of negotiations at the highest level, the United States and the Soviet Union:

—Have agreed to concentrate this year on working out an agreement for the limitation of the deployment of antiballistic missile systems (ABMs)."

—Have also agreed that, together with concluding an agreement to limit ABMs, they will agree on certain measures with respect to the limitation of offensive strategic weapons."

"The two sides are taking this year in the conviction that it will create more favorable conditions for further negotiations to limit all strategic arms," the statement added. "These negotiations will be actively pursued."

Protest optimism and some skepticism greeted the announcement in Congress. One of those voicing skepticism was Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Another Democratic leader, Rep. F. Edward Hebert of Louisiana, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, commented that "It's all well and good, but let's keep our powder dry."

Republicans and some other Democrats rated the development favorably.

Whether the two superpowers will actually reach a disarmament accord in the talks that began in 1969 remains to be seen. White House officials acknowledged that the two sides have not abandoned basic positions, which so far have defied lengthy efforts by negotiators for an agreement.

But the high level announcement did seem to indicate an interest by the leaders of both great powers in pushing ahead with the search for an accord on curbing the nuclear arms race, rather than letting the effort die in a diplomatic stalemate.

Ambassador Gerard Smith, head of the U.S. delegation to the SALT talks, currently being held in Vienna, is slated to return there shortly to wind up the current negotiating session. He expects the next round will begin in Helsinki early this summer.

White House officials declined to predict an arms limiting agreement with the Soviets will be reached this year. But they said that with the new high level political impetus from Washington and Moscow they expect the pace of negotiations to quicken.

Whether either the United States or the Soviet Union made much of a concession in issuing Thursday's statement was not clear from the public wording. Varying interpretations were offered here and in Moscow.

The SALT talks which got under way in Finland in the fall of 1969 have been bogged down since last year over what strategic weapons should be included in an arms control deal.

After the United States turned back a Soviet bid to include short-range tactical U.S. nuclear weapons based in Europe, the Russians proposed last fall that as a first step the two sides agree on a limitation of defensive missiles—ABMs.

The United States objected to an ABMs-only deal. Its surveys said that ABMs were designed to counter intercontinental ballistic missiles, and therefore any meaningful strategic disarmament pact should include restrictions on both offensive and defensive weapons at the same time.

The U.S. Safeguard antiballistic missile system has a mission of protecting U.S. ICBMs from Soviet missiles should the Soviets launch a first strike. The Nixon administration is now asking Congress to expand the Safeguard ABM system.

The basic U.S. negotiating proposal at SALT has been to offer a curb on ABMs in return for a limit on offensive missiles, particularly the giant Soviet Ssbs.

White House officials said the work on the Safeguard ABM will be going ahead pending what might come out of the SALT talks in the future.

The wording from Moscow of the new statement clearly left open the possibility that the Soviets will still push for a separate ABMs-only agreement. They have a relatively small ABM system now installed around Moscow.

According to White House officials, (1) negotiations or curbs on offensive nuclear weapons will be pursued at the same time as the talks on ABMs and (2) an ABM deal will be concluded without an agreement also on limiting offensive weapons.

Common Market Hopes Brighter For British

PARIS (AP) — President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath ranged over Europe's future Thursday, with France authoritatively reported resolved to let Britain join the Common Market.

Word of the historic shift in the position of the Pompidou government came from high French sources. They acknowledged, under questioning, some tough issues have yet to be negotiated.

There was no confirmation from the British, who twice were barred from membership by French vetoes in the 1960s.

Prime Minister Emilio Colombo and Chancellor Willy Brandt were said to have urged Pompidou to meet Heath and in exchange of letters warned him strongly of the dangers of French isolation.

British sources went no further than to say the atmosphere was one of relaxed friendliness, without formalities.

The president and prime minister were said to have swapped ideas first about the sort of Europe each wants. Then they were said to have discussed the role a united Western Europe could play in the world, meaning in such flashpoint areas as the Middle East, Asia and in relations with the United States and with the Communist powers.

Later, Pompidou and Heath outlined the sort of parliamentary situation each faces on the question of Common Market enlargement. This gave Heath the chance to explain how his government expects to cope with the fierce resistance within his own Conservative party, and within the opposition Labor party, on the matter of British entry. All British party leaders are pledged to support this—providing the terms are not too stiff.

Outside Elysee Palace, senior French authorities, familiar with Pompidou's thinking, un-happily discussed their government's approach and made these points:

—Their president, as they see it, has taken the basic political decision that will permit British entry.

—Precise terms and time scale will be matters for the Brussels negotiators who, they expect will be under the spur of the agreement-in-principle emerging here.

—Pompidou still may be expected to resist certain British demands that would give Britain a position of permanent privileges within the community, now made up of Belgium, France, West Germany, Luxembourg, Italy and the Netherlands. These would include preserving a special, independent international role for the pound sterling, and safeguards for Commonwealth producers at the expense of those within the community.

Sadat Sets Guidelines For U.S. In Mideast

CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat declared Thursday that President Nixon must "squeeze and wring" Israel into withdrawing from occupied Arab land if he wants to avert a new Middle East war.

In a two-pronged policy speech to the Egyptian National Assembly, Sadat discussed the American role in the Arab-Israeli crisis and set down guidelines for internal reform after his purge of political foes who tried to oust him last week.

Thumping his fist on the lectern, Sadat revealed he had officially demanded that Nixon force Israel to withdraw from all Arab territory captured in the 1967 war.

The United States, Sadat said, must "openly and frankly" define its position on the crisis. "We are at a historic crossroads. It is a question of peace or war."

He reiterated Egypt's position on a hoped-for interim agreement to reopen the Suez Canal, blocked since the war.

Egypt's bedrock conditions are: —The agreement must not be a separate deal but must lead to complete Israeli withdrawal from all Arab land.

—Egypt insists on sending troops across to the Israeli-held east bank as Israel pulls back its forces from the canal.

—The current tactic cease-fire will not become a permanent and official arrangement as long as Israeli soldiers are on Arab soil.

Israel opposes withdrawing from Egyptian territory unless it can be shown its security is not endangered. It proposes holding on to Sharm el Sheikh at the southern tip of Sinai Peninsula, which overlooks the entrance to the Gulf of Aqaba, Israel's only southern outlet to the sea.

Recently, the Israelis have reportedly softened their stand. While at first maintaining no Egyptian troops should be allowed across the canal, they are said now to be willing to allow noncombat Egyptians to cross while Israeli troops pull back out of shooting range—a distance of about 25 miles.

The demand that Nixon "wring" Israel, Sadat said, was made to Secretary of State William P. Rogers during his visit to Cairo earlier this month.

Rogers later visited Israel. His deputy, Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco, then reported to Sadat.

Turning to the internal scene, Sadat ordered new elections for the Arab Socialist Union, the country's only political party. The elections will reorganize the party "from the bottom to the top," he said.

The ASU was one of the strongholds of the group of ministers accused of plotting to oust Sadat. They and more than 100 other officials are now under arrest.

The latest elections in 1968, Sadat said, were rigged in favor of the plotters. The late President Gamal Abdel Nasser wanted to correct these irregularities but was preoccupied with the war effort.

N. Viets Gain Supply Route

SAIGON (AP) — The North Vietnamese gained a new supply route through southern Laos Thursday just as monsoons began flooding older routes farther to the north.

This setback to allied commands in Indochina came with the abandonment by North Vietnamese forces of the last remaining outpost on the Bolovens Plateau in southernmost Laos. Control of the plateau gives Hanoi direct access to South Vietnam's central highlands and northeastern Cambodia.

Monsoons have begun sweeping the northern part of South Vietnam and the Laotian area near it and the allied commands had been counting on the weather to hold off any Communist command offensives over the next few months.

The government outpost at Houei Kong in the Bolovens Plateau was evacuated in the face of advancing North Vietnamese troops when Laotian field commanders decided it could not be held.

The eastern edge of the plateau overlooks the Ho Chi Minh supply trail and Hanoi's control of the plateau would enable it to expand the trail's road network westward.

Truck traffic on the trail itself was reported sharply reduced. U.S. aerial reconnaissance observers noted some dirt roads flooded or so muddy that movement was difficult.

The monsoon storms now beginning to sweep the trail also cut into some U.S. bombing and gunship attacks, but did not affect the B-52 heavy bombers which fly at 30,000 feet and above the bad weather.

Because of this, the Strategic Air Command sent most of its Pacific fleet of B-52s against the Ho Chi Minh trail.

U.S. commanders expected a new North Vietnamese offensive to support the South Vietnamese forces but there were no indications from a North Vietnamese source that the new offensive would be launched.

The U.S. Command, in its weekly casualty summary, reported 24 American servicemen killed in combat last week, the lowest weekly count since the first week in February. At the same time, the command said 27 Americans died from non-combat causes, such as accidents and illnesses. It was the first time since early December that the nonbattle deaths exceeded the number killed in combat.

South Vietnamese casualties also dropped last week, with Saigon headquarters reporting 20 government soldiers killed and 93 wounded, compared with 20 killed and 100 wounded a week earlier.

In Cambodia, government forces began a new operation to open an alternate supply route from Phnom Penh to the sea.

The drive was undertaken because Communist-led forces control Highway 4 connecting the Cambodian capital with Kompong Som on the Gulf of Siam, Cambodia's only deepwater seaport.

Soviets Convict Jewish Hijackers

MOSCOW (AP) — Nine Jews who had hoped to emigrate to Israel were convicted Thursday in Leningrad of charges stemming from an attempted air hijacking. They received sentences ranging from one to 10 years at hard labor.

The Tass news agency said the sentences read out by Chief Judge Nina Isakova were greeted with "general approval" in the courtroom.

Attendance at the trial was by written invitation only from Judge Isakova.

Thus the nine-day trial ended as it began, in virtual secrecy, although Tass contended all along it was an open procedure.

"After a 1½-week open trial in Leningrad," Tass reported, "the court has passed sentence on a group of criminals."

A sentence of 10 years was given Gilya Butman, 30-year-old engineer described by the prosecution as one of the organizers of the plan to fly 13 persons out of the Soviet Union in a hijacked aircraft on June 15 and make their way to Israel.

Viktor Shilbans, 30, a doctor, got the lightest sentence—a year.

The 12 persons, tried and convicted last December, were arrested on the terms of Leningrad's Spetsnaz Airport before they could reach the 13-hour plane. In all, 25 others were arrested that day or soon afterward, indicating the police had advance knowledge of the attempt.

Lev Yagman, one of the men convicted Thursday, was arrested in Odessa on June 15. Odessa is about 1,500 miles from Leningrad.

The thrust of the official argument as reported by Tass was that the nine were to emigrate as accomplices in the hijacking preparation, but Tass held one defendant, Viktor Pashkevich, had no knowledge of the plan.

Sergei M. not all Tass said made a strong case for acquittal of Pashkevich and Soviet citizens. A charge that Soviet city drew Pashkevich into the net was not "convicted" as was never reported.

What the defendants had in common was their wish to go to Israel. Most had applied for exit visas and had been turned down. Others had worked hard.

Tass never reported that interest in leaving Russia, and, inferentially, by their participation in the plot.

Senseless Waste Of Man's Heritage

Some of the more dismal news to come out of the current struggle in Southeast Asia in recent weeks concerns a relic of a former time.

Angkor, ancient capital of the great Khmer empire, predecessor of contemporary Cambodia, is reported to have come under fire and been damaged. Captured by invading Thais in the 15th century, it was abandoned and largely forgotten until rescued from the smothering jungle by French archeologists in the last century. Consisting of the huge temple of Angkor Wat and the walled city of Angkor Thom, Angkor's square miles of elaborately carved walls, terraces and towers are a true wonder of the world.

The area was occupied by Communist forces early in the Cambodian fighting and the Phnom Penh government, for fear of damage, declared it off limits to its own troops. An unauthorized artillery barrage now is reported to have damaged severely the south wall of Angkor Wat.

All too unfortunately, Angkor is far from the first such historic and artistic monument lost to the accidents and expediences of warfare. Man's belated history abounds in similar incidents, many of which might be rationalized as necessary at the time but most recognized in retrospect as tragic loss.

Angkor has its predecessor in the current Indochinese conflict in Hue, former imperial capital of Vietnam which was the chief target and major sufferer of the Communists' Tet offensive of 1968.

World War II may have set some sort of a record. There was, for example, Monte Cassino, the 1,000-year-old abbey atop a strategic peak in central Italy, pulverized by American bombers to clear German opposition to the Allied advance. Germany itself, before the war a museum of a nation, lost much. A particular tragedy was baroque Dresden, one of the world's most beautiful cities and untouched until leveled in one night by the great Allied fire raid of Feb. 13, 1945.

The Germans left their own ruinous mark over much of Europe. In Poland, with incidental assistance from Soviet artillery, they destroyed the Medieval heart of Warsaw, since carefully recreated stone by antique stone by the supposedly no-nonsense Communist regime.

Perhaps the supreme example of senseless squandering of the heritage of past greatness is the Parthenon. Athens' temple on the Acropolis survived virtually intact for centuries after the decline of Greece. It was not transformed into the ruins familiar to tourists today until 1687 when, in use by the Turks as a powder magazine, it was shelled by Venetian warships.

The list can go on, indicting British, French, Japanese, Persians, Romans, Babylonians — all capable of acting the vandal when the circumstances are right.

What it all proves is that man is nothing if not consistent in his historic willingness to sacrifice irreplaceable bits of his history to the martial passions of the moment.

Lung Damage Comes Soon

Millions of adult Americans have quit cigarette smoking in response to medical warnings in recent years. The warnings have been proportionately less successful among teenagers. Despite government and private educational efforts, discouragingly high numbers of young people continue to take up the habit.

One prime reason for this is that most of the medical warnings dwell upon what may happen after many years of smoking. Thus, circulatory problems and lung cancer strike young people as being a distant threat about which they need not concern themselves. One sees a great deal of the attitude summed up in this common remark: "I can always quit after awhile."

A research report just published in the journal Science makes it clear that this attitude is even less sensible than had been supposed. The thrust of what three Yale Medical School physicians found is that teenagers who have smoked just a few years may already have lung damage in consequence.

The damage falls short of that oft-cited bugaboo, lung cancer, but it is bad enough—a discernible loss of lung function. Several hundred young people were tested, and the doctors found that "coughing, phlegm and shortness of breath were much more common among smokers than among non-smokers."

This emphatically gives the lie to the notion, so commonly found among teenagers, that they can smoke for years with impunity and then stop before lung cancer or other smoking-related disease becomes a serious threat. It just isn't so.

Teenagers who start smoking from now on, or who don't have the good sense to quit if they've already started, will have to live with the knowledge that serious lung damage may result within a rather short time.

Consider, as an example, the athletically inclined boy who for one reason or another starts smoking at age 14 when he is in his second year of junior high school. What he must face, now, is the likelihood that if he keeps on smoking his "wind" won't be up to par for strenuous sports by the time he is, say, a junior in high school. It's something for the young smokers to think about.

Nixon Sets Hard Line To Defeat Troop Cut Move

By WALTER E. MEARS

AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon set the line, and it was a hard line: "no compromise."

And so began a campaign of organized persuasion: figures of the Democratic past allied with a Republican White House against legislation to force withdrawal of 150,000 U.S.

troops from Western Europe. The White House deployed its figure of five lobbyists, the State Department and the Pentagon set their liaison men to work, all with one set of orders:

Line up the votes to defeat the troop-cut amendment of Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and all its compromise variations.

"The President himself came down hard: "He's a real hawk on this one," one administration official said.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers took a personal hand, too. He invited uncommitted senators, among them Sen. Harry F. Byrd, a Virginia independent, to the State Department to talk it over. He set up headquarters in a vice presidential office near the Senate floor and, later, in the back room of Sen. Hugh Scott's office, to argue the administration case man-to-man with the senators making the decision today.

Former Undersecretary of State George W. Ball came to Washington, last Thursday, two days after the Mansfield measure was introduced, and campaigned against it in person and by telephone.

Gen. Andrew J. Goodpastor, the NATO commander, was summoned home and enlisted in the campaign. He talked to Byrd, Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., and other members.

Much of the public persuasion was the task handed Democrats, led by former Presidents Lyndon B. Johnson, and Harry S. Truman and former Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Some senators who got the treatment, from administration officials or from the Democratic volunteers, said the arguments advanced privately were essentially those the Senate has been debating all week:

That the cut would undermine European confidence in the U.S. commitment there, seriously harm the Atlantic alliance, eliminate any prospect of negotiated agreement for a pullback in Eastern as well as Western Europe.

It reportedly was Acheson who suggested the two former presidents be asked to speak out against the Mansfield proposal.

Under normal protocol, Nixon himself would make direct contact with former presidents.

The White House said, however, that Acheson advised the administration late Saturday night Truman wished to issue a statement opposing a unilateral cut in U.S. manpower committed to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Truman's message was issued Sunday in Key Biscayne, Fla., by the White House.

Ball, a Democrat, said Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's national security adviser, asked him to join the campaign against the Mansfield measure.

Ball said he had long been apprehensive about Mansfield proposals for reduction of U.S. forces in Western Europe.

"I have been seeing a lot of people here," he said. "Of course, I know a lot of people on the Hill from my years in Washington."

One of those people is Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn.; indeed, Ball resigned as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations to join Humphrey's 1968 presidential campaign against Nixon.

Humphrey announced his opposition to the Mansfield amendment Monday in a San Francisco speech. He is, however, among sponsors of a compromise proposal by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., which the administration doesn't want passed, either.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, a 1972 presidential prospect, also opposed the Mansfield measure.

One administration lobbyist said the Humphrey and Muskie pronouncements were crucial: "That took the issue off a partisan basis on which we would always lose, of course."

Mansfield said the administration's public campaign was fashioned around "Old Guards, old faces."

"I don't think they're been too helpful," he said. "I think the administration has conducted an overkill operation. Most of these people have a vested interest in a policy they helped to create years ago."

Mansfield said he knew Ball had been making the rounds in the Senate. "I haven't heard of Acheson proving the corridors," he said.

Mideast Hopes Up

Egypt VP Ouster Is Gain For West

By RAY CROMLEY
WASHINGTON (NEA) — The ouster of Egyptian Vice President Ali Sabry, long known for his anti-U.S. and pro-Soviet views, is good news of great import to the United States, the Middle East and to the world.

In firing Sabry, President Anwar Sadat indicates that he feels himself secure enough (in sufficient control of the government) to move Egypt ahead with his own program.

Sabry is one of the original backers of the late President Gamel Abdel Nasser, who indicated that Sabry's appointment to the vice-presidency was a gesture of good will toward the Soviet Union.

As in many other lands, the Egyptian vice-presidency is primarily a post of prestige, with little real strength. Sabry, so far as is now known, holds on to some of his power — his influential backers in military and civilian life, his Russian connections, his party post, and his influence on the powerful newspaper Al Gomhuriya.

What is significant is that Sadat now feels himself strong enough to oust from this symbolic but prestigious post a man with such powerful national and international connections.

For a strong Sadat is, if he wills, in a position to make a reasonable peace with the Israelis (assuming good will on both sides) despite opposition from militant factions within the military and "ultra" civilian groups. No weak Egyptian president could dare make peace with Israel.

In the beginning, it was believed here that Sadat would be weak, that he was doomed to be a sort of caretaker over a shaky coalition, a man able to do little more than follow the tide of greatest pressure. His first appointments seemed to confirm that view. He was careful to select men from all strong factions.

When Sadat made his initial peace offers, it was doubted that he had the power to make his proposals stick within Egypt. It was feared here that when the chips were down that he would have to back down.

As time moved on, President Nixon's advisers grew more confident. But they believed quick action was necessary. They worried that if concrete results were not quickly forthcoming, Sadat's enemies (the militants) would gain in strength and pull him down, supplanting him with one of their own. Americans in high places then fretted at what they called Israel's indecision.

Now the wheel has taken another turn. Sadat seems more firmly in the saddle. The chances for peace (or a partial peace) seem stronger.

Ann Landers:

Jarred By Hair-Sprouting Moles

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please tell me why a well-educated, well-traveled, socially prominent, affluent, middle-aged woman who spends a fortune on clothes and a mint of money in the beauty shop is content to go through life with two ugly hair-sprouting moles on her face? One is about the size of a large pea. The other is nearly as big as a dime.

Whenever I see this woman I am jarred anew by the sight of her moles although I have known her for several years. I cannot understand her indifference. Is it possible she is unaware of these unsightly growths? Would it be terribly rude of me to suggest that she have them removed? I'd like to hear your opinion on this.

— Cape Cod
Dear Cod: Keep quiet. The woman knows the moles are there. If she wanted to do something about them she would. Apparently they do not bother her. And, frankly, they should not bother YOU that much. I suspect someone in your childhood (a person you didn't like) had hair-sprouting moles, and this is why you are over-reacting.

Dear Ann Landers: Who do you think you are that you can call a person insensitive, inconsiderate and sadist just because she telephones a friend in the middle of the night to tell her a mutual acquaintance has died? More often than not the person who makes such a call hates to be the one who breaks the bad news, but someone has to do it.

What about nurses, doctors, police officers? Are these people sadists also? I hope you do better on your next answer. This one was lousy. — Green Bay Reader

Dear Green: Nurses, doctors and police officers must not tell the next of kin because it is their professional responsibility to do so. Instructions must be given and decisions must be made. It is up to the family to issue orders.

Please tell me what purpose is served by waking up a person in the middle of the night to inform him that a mutual acquaintance has died? The person who gets the call can do nothing but lose a night's sleep.

As I said in my first response, anyone who feels that he cannot wait until morning to pass the bad news has a streak of sadism.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter has always been precocious. Beverly could read before she started school and her memory was extraordinary at a very early age. She skipped the first grade and went directly into the second. That was three years ago. Now the teacher wants Bev to skip the sixth grade and go from the fifth to the seventh. I am against it. The girl would find herself in high school with students who are 2½ and 3 years older than she. (I forgot to mention that Bev was permitted to start school at age 4½.)

My husband says I am depriving her of an opportunity — that she will be bored if she isn't challenged to learn. He also insists it would be an honor to graduate from high school at 14½. What is your opinion?

— Super Smart Can Be Troubled
Dear Su: This is an honor your daughter can live without. The social pressures on a girl who is three years younger than her classmates can produce serious problems.

Brilliance can be a curse if it is not properly channeled. Go to school and talk with the principal. Ask if he can suggest ways to keep the girl intellectually stimulated without advancing her another grade.

Private colleges and universities are appreciative and they have reason to be. Most colleges are in the red and many are getting redder, while colleges in the black are generally growing grayer.

Law For Today

Q. I am a 17-year-old high school senior, but my mother still opens and reads my mail before giving it to me. She says she doesn't want me to be exposed to any of the garbage being sent through the mails. Does she have a right to do this?

A. No law states that parents may open and read the mail addressed to their children, but also, no law prohibits this. According to federal postal regulations though, your mother does have the right to control the delivery of any mail addressed to you as long as you are a minor.

Here's How

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

The vacation period is a good time to look for a retirement home. It will help ease a wife's path toward future retirement, says a woman who was shocked when her husband said they no longer could live in their family home.

Retirement is frightening for many couples. They fear the unknown after a lifetime of routine. The husband wonders how they are going to make ends meet, the wife wonders how she is going to adjust to a new life.

A man shouldn't wait until the last pay check to tell his wife he will be unable to meet the taxes, insurance, house maintenance on his reduced income of pension, social security, savings. He should spare his wife the pressures, but if he waits to tell her, she may be too shocked to help in the planning.

Here are some ideas that may help smooth the way:

Retirement should be discussed at least five years before "R" day. The couple should determine the income they will have from all sources—pension, social security, investments, savings. They might cut corners now and save more, or change investments.

They should discuss areas or communities that interest them. If there is a lack of urgency, they will be able to discuss it more rationally.

Vacations may be used to visit prospective retirement areas. Gregarious couples, who fear losing old friends, may find a place they like, and build friendships before retirement day. One couple could hardly wait for the day of retirement so they could make the move to a community they had chosen.

They had spent three happy vacations there.

In discussing retirement plans, a couple might analyze what they will miss most in their present set-up. The house? Furnishings? Neighbors? Recreation? They might discover there are no real ties. They may have bought their home for its proximity to schools and parks, but now their children are married.

It is particularly good to find a retirement area that provides a busy life—fun, games, hobbies, recreation. Some people may enjoy the retirement villages with people in their own age bracket, but others shy away from that idea. They would rather live in a mixed community.

A 60-year-old woman, the wife of a doctor, gave several reasons why she turned down a beautiful retirement village suggested by her husband.

"The place was so quiet and orderly it reminded me of a graveyard. I could think only that it would seem as if we had gone there to die."

"We have been around sick and dying people all our lives, and I just decided that it is the very thing I must get away from. I need a lively atmosphere if I am to start a new life."

It is good to know what you need and to try to find the place that suits your needs. But you can't really judge a community at a glance. Many well-known communities look lovely when they are, in reality, far from it. You should try to spend a little time at a place before making a decision.

A garden wedding is planned for July 3 at the Thomas family home near Meadowview, Virginia.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Syphilis Germs Die Outside Body

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Is it possible to contract syphilis without sex? I have had many of the listed symptoms but the only place I could have gotten them would be a contaminated glass or something of that nature. Each symptom has been in the correct chronological order for the disease progression but it could easily be coincidence. I have been worrying about this for the past seven months. I have never had any type of sex with anyone.

Dear Reader—Yes, it is possible to become infected with syphilis without having sexual relations, although it is not very common. The germ that causes the disease can be transmitted in fluid such as saliva. The germ, however, will not live long outside of the body.

Amorous kissing with all that entails is one way of transmitting the disease. It is possible under ideal circumstances to transmit it from drinking glasses and bottles. The chances, however, that you have acquired syphilis, if it is true that you have not had any sexual relations with anyone, is relatively remote.

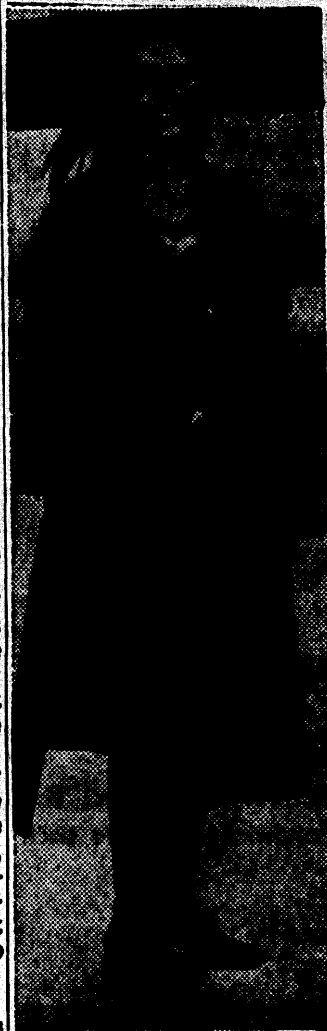

You can find out by having a blood test done through the venereal disease section of either your county or city health office. It would not be necessary for you to give your name. In fact, all such clinics are confidential. For young people, the parents need not know anything about it and the health office does not divulge any information about anyone they see—young or old.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I have a decision to make which is very hard for me. I have a mole on my left cheek that has been there since I was a small girl (I am now 67). It is unsightly and the last few months it has grown some. It is about a half-inch in diameter. My doctor wants to take it off soon. Should I let him or have it taken off by a specialist or should I let it remain? He said he is certain it is not cancerous.

Dear Reader—Any mole any place on the body that begins to change in size or appearance should be removed. The only way to tell if it is cancer or not is to remove it and look at the section under a microscope. This also enables the doctor to tell whether or not all of the tumor has been removed in case it is cancerous. If it is removed, your scar should be almost unnoticeable. It is not a very difficult procedure. You should let your doctor go ahead and do what he has recommended.

Please send your questions and comments to Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Lamb cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

YOUR BIRTHDAY AND HOROSCOPE

By STELLA WILDER

FRIDAY, MAY 21—Born today, you are inclined toward extravagance and must be especially careful, therefore, not to take the full responsibility for family finances upon yourself. You need to learn the value of saving for a rainy day—and, if necessary, you must appoint a guardian of your finances until you do. Otherwise, the day will come when you find yourself in the most difficult of financial straits—and there will be no one to blame but yourself. Highly original and inventive, you enjoy experimenting with new methods, seeking new objectives, taking new approaches to old objectives. Whatever you do always ends up with your particular stamp on it, for you are quite unable to leave well enough alone, to follow another's directions absolutely. Only take care that those in authority know and expect that you will add your own touches; otherwise, there could be trouble.

You possess a keen wit and a ready tongue. A delightful and interesting conversationalist, you charm your listeners with a combination of irrefutable logic and side-splitting humor. Those who can best you in a verbal battle are few and far between, for you know precisely how to use words to your best advantage.

To find what is in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

Gen Tel Gives 'Facilityman' Post To Gal

JERSEYVILLE — Mrs. Betty Davenport has been named "facilityman" for the General Telephone Company of Illinois, the first woman to fill the job of "facilityman". Mrs. Davenport is the wife of Donald "Doodles" Davenport who operates "Doodles" Barber Shop in Jerseyville.

In her new assignment Mrs. Davenport takes some friendly teasing as to whether she should be titled "facilityman" or "facilitywoman". She says, "It certainly has nothing to do with the liberation movement." She has been with the company for a number of years and when the job opened up she says she bid on it because she thought she would like it. Previous plant experience as repair clerk and test desk clerk has given her a good background for her new job, according to her supervisor, Virgil Kemp, who has great praise for her work.

Amos W. Hack, Native Of Nebo, Dies Wednesday

A letter from Philadelphia reads in part: "I remember A, B, Y and Z before their places in columns were taken by North, South, East and West. In the old days Z didn't make every hand. Doesn't he ever get set nowadays?"

Z decided that his four clubs made an unusual no-trump undesirable. If he bid it, Y would become declarer; and Z did not relish the prospect. So he passed after B opened with one spade. The bidding progressed as one might expect and Z wound up as declarer at four diamonds doubled.

B won the first trick with the king of hearts and saw that a spade lead was indicated. He and A had been working on suit preference signals so B led the deuce of spades. A ruffed and returned his fourth best club to B's king. B gave his partner another spade ruff whereupon A led his queen of trumps.

After this start there was no way for poor Z to get a trick out of dummy. He wound up losing two spade ruffs, four clubs and a heart for minus 700 and a bottom score. The best East and West could do as declarer would be to pick up 650 points.

"You boys still defend better than anyone," said Z.

"I was afraid to double you," remarked A. "I've seen you perform too many miracles. This time you couldn't do anything because your opponents wouldn't let you in the lead."

ASHBAKERS HOME FROM SOUTH, WEST

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ashbaker have arrived at their Murrayville home after vacationing two weeks in Florida and the same amount of time in California. In Florida they visited her brother, Harry (Ollie), and family at Lake Park and in California with a son, Vernon Ashbaker, and family at San Bernardino.

In California they visited Disneyland, a winery at Cucamonga, Rocky Beach near San Pedro, and Long Beach and gathered shells along the shore. The trip included a ride through the San Bernardino mountains.

LESS CRIME HERE
BARTONVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The crime rate here dropped during 1970. Jay Heinrich, police chief of this village of 8,423 persons, said arrests numbered 610, down from 664 arrests in 1969. Juvenile arrests were 37, compared to last year's 76.

Car Patch Too Heavy To Mend Rubber Gloves

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem
DEAR POLLY—I have a supply of rubber gloves that have acquired a little hole in each. To save expense, does anyone know if this patch can be bought for these gloves? I find car patching is too heavy to hold.—MRS. R.P.B.

DEAR POLLY—Shirley could shorten her crocheted dress as I did mine. I sewed across the desired length several times on the sewing machine and then cut the excess off just below the stitching. Button hole stitch over the edge or crochet over it. Mine turned out fine.—MRS. F.M.

DEAR POLLY—Shirley could shorten her crocheted dress by threading narrow ribbons, vertically, at intervals around the bottom and then pull them up evenly to the desired length. Tie a small bow at the top of each ribbon and the dress will look as if it was made that way. She could coordinate the colors or have them contrast. Should it be desired, the ribbons could be removed later to make the dress longer.—ELEANOR

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. B.B. could shorten her heavy knit dress that would be too bulky with a hem turned up by marking the proper length with chalk and then zigzag stitching over this line twice by machine. Cut off the excess and use the same color yarn to crochet an edge around the bottom over the stitching. A contrasting color could be used and then the same edge added around the sleeves and neck of the dress. Mine turned out real nice and I could lengthen it again by adding more rows of crochet around the bottom.—M.S.

Hado's They'll Do It Every Time

Common Cause Applies People Power Against Vietnam War

By TOM TIEDE
WASHINGTON (NEA) — The armies can't do it. The protesters can't do it. Even the increasingly restless members of Congress can't end the battle in Vietnam.

But maybe The People can. The People in this case are the 140,000 members of the commonly feisty citizen's lobby, Common Cause. Only nine months old, the lobby has entered the fight against Vietnam leading with its nose.

Using pressure tactics unusual even in Washington, the organization has put together what publicist Tom Matthews calls "the greatest lobby package of all time." Each Cause member has been given a thick portfolio of the fight plan, which has as its focal point a "Dear Colleagues" letter written by six congressmen, three Democrats and three Republicans. The letter, hinting of congressional debate to come, urges the House delegation to call for war's end by the new year—and to do so on the record by signing the letter for all the nation to witness.

By itself, the letter would normally elicit little response. But some 800 Common Cause volunteers have been conducting a telephone campaign to force the response. Working at several points in the nation, concentrating on the constituents of moderate ("convincible") lawmakers, the volunteers say that upward of 90 percent of the people called are willing to wire or write their representatives.

The result so far has been "splendid," Matthews says. "We need 218 congressional signatures for a majority in the House. And we've already got half that." If the fight is won, assuredly, it will not only be the biggest but the only victory for Common Cause. Though the group has entered a number of Washington battles in its short life (the invasion of Laos, election spending, reform of the seniority system in Congress), it has not only not won, but hardly gotten into the real action. The organization as yet is just not strong enough to field much of a team. And the image of citizens' lobby groups—they come noisily and go quietly—is certainly not one to cause much trembling inside Washington's places of power.

Yet the hope at CC is the Big Apple, the war, can be picked. And nothing would be of more satisfaction to the organization's chairman, the protean, urbane, 59-year-old John Gardner. Not only would a CC victory bring an end to "this war we are half in and half out of," he says, but it would serve dramatic evidence that The Silent Majority is dead and The People have replaced it.

To some extent, Gardner (former HEW secretary) has already proven the latter. Despite early cynicism that his group would attract "only malcontent Eastern liberals," the facts are otherwise. Some 5,000 new members (at $15 a head) join weekly, with 66 percent coming from the West, Midwest and South. "I don't know exactly what kind of people we're getting," Gardner says, "but from meetings I've attended I'd say a good variety of them. Young and old, liberals and conservatives."

One thing for sure, Gardner adds, the majority of members are "very much concerned." They see things happening, can't control them, and are angry. Like so many citizens today, they are seeking a way to "do something"—about poverty, about government, about war, about quality environment. "We all have the feeling we want to complain to the manager," says Gardner, and it is the goal of Common Cause, one of them, to make certain that the manager is listening. In the case of Vietnam, Gardner believes, the manager has been deaf. "I'm not blaming anyone for this," he says, "but I think this lobby has been working to win the people have been voting." He refers to a sheet of paper on his desk. "Now look at the polls—not just one, but one right after another. In January, Gallup reported 73 percent of Americans want the troops home this year. In February, a majority felt Laos would lengthen not shorten the war. Again in February, seven of ten people said they felt the government wasn't being honest about the war. This is what the people are saying. They want out of this war now."

Thus it is that Common Cause, flat out, full bore, is seeking victory for The People. And never mind the brakes. Some say the pressure tactics are wrong, some say Congress should not be intimidated or the President forced into decisions—but Gardner and his citizen's lobby feel Vietnam is an idea whose time has gone. And so: "Hello, Mr. White, this is Geri Vought calling from Common Cause..."

On the House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures
The toll and backaches associated with gardening and yard grooming have been largely eliminated as a result of the spreading use of power machines.

These machines have done more than merely make the tasks easier. They have enabled amateurs to obtain professional results, in much the same manner as power tools have turned woodworking tyros into something resembling expert carpenters.

While the power lawn mower is solidly entrenched as the principal implement for keeping grass to a desired height, more and more persons are discovering that the "finished" look of a lawn requires the use of what is called an edge-trimmer. It does what its name implies. It makes neat edges around sidewalks and driveways, and creates trenches along flower beds or wherever beveled edges are wanted. And it trims the grass around walls, walks and driveways and on steep slopes where heavier mowers are difficult to maneuver.

Powered edge-trimmers usually are electric, with extension cords of 50, 100 or more feet available. Because all power tools require a certain amount of maintenance as well as observance of safety precautions, I asked an expert on the subject for some tips to pass on to newcomers using electric edge-trimmers.

"It must be kept in mind," said E. Lawrence Tabat, vice president of the power tool division of a large manufacturing company, "that although edge-trimmers are engineered to give long life in the face of heavy loads, they can't be expected to do a bulldozer's job." Tabat pointed out that, after each use, all debris—such as dirt, grass and manure—should be removed from the scatter shields and bottom of the edge-trimmer. Feet and other parts of the body should be kept away from the fast-turning blade. When trimming hillsides, slopes or other up-and-down areas, care should be exercised to avoid a slip or fall that could cause the tool to be pushed back upon the operator.

Other advice passed along by Tabat:

For edging, the tool is adjusted so that the blade rotates at a 90-degree angle to the ground; for trenching, the angle is at a 45-degree angle.

Safety goggles should be worn when trenching to avoid eye injuries from flying debris. Make periodic inspections to be sure that the blade is sharp; if found to be dull, it should be removed and sharpened.

Never make any adjustments until the plug has been removed from the electric outlet.

Read the instructions to determine service and lubrication procedures.

RACING ON SUNDAY

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — When the thoroughbred race track opened here in 1967 the policy was "never on Sunday." But this year there is to be racing on 12 Sundays at the Delaware Park track. The first meeting of 33 days runs through Monday, July 5. The second meeting of 33 days runs from Aug. 21 through Sunday, Sept. 28. The track will be closed on Tuesdays at both meetings. Another departure from the past will find Friday racing starting at 3:30 o'clock instead of 1:30.

Use Left Over Beef Roast In Pot Pie

By SHIRLEY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: When I have cooked a large piece of beef—beef roast in the oven or on top of the range—I've had lots of the meat leftover. Can you suggest a way to use it?—THRIFTY COOK.

DEAR THRIFTY COOK: Families usually enjoy beef pot pie and so you might like to try the following recipe. The pastry for this pie is the cornmeal variety so it will have a crunchy texture—good contrast for the filling. But one tip: don't roll out the topping until you are ready to use it because cornmeal pastry has a tendency to become crumbly if it stands and dries out.—C.B.

BEEF POT PIE
Cornmeal Pastry, see recipe 3 carrots, pared and sliced 1/4 inch thick
1 medium onion, peeled and coarsely chopped
1 package (10 ounces) frozen cut green beans
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon dried crushed basil
3 cups beef stock
4 cups coarsely chopped cooked beef
1/4 cup flour

Prepare Cornmeal Pastry. Into a large saucepan turn the carrots, onion, green beans, pepper, basil and 1 1/2 cups of the stock. Simmer, covered, until tender—about 15 minutes. Add beef.

Mix together until smooth the flour and remaining 1/4 cup stock; quickly stir into beef mixture. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Pour into an ungreased shallow baking dish (about 10 by 10 by 2 inches). On a floured pastry cloth, with a floured glass—covered rolling pin, roll out Cornmeal Pastry to fit top of baking dish; cut slashes in top of pastry to allow steam to escape. Place over beef filling.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until filling bubbles and pastry is browned—about 30 minutes.

Makes 8 servings.

CORNMEAL PASTRY

1/2 cup enriched white or yellow cornmeal
1/4 cup sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup shortening
3 to 4 tablespoons cold water

Into a medium mixing bowl sift together the cornmeal, flour and salt.

With a pastry blender cut in the shortening until particles are fine.

Add water, a tablespoon at a time, stirring lightly with a fork just until dry ingredients are dampened. Form into a ball. Cover tightly with transparent plastic wrap. Use as directed in recipe for Beef Pot Pie.

SPRING FESTIVAL HELD IN CASS

CHANDLERVILLE — The Chandlerville Women's Club held its 44th annual spring festival May 19 at the United Methodist church. A Swiss steak dinner was served by the Golden Rule ladies of the church.

The invocation was given by Mrs. Charles Allen. Mrs. John Pears presented over the business meeting and Mrs. Paul Elchmeyer read the minutes and gave the financial report. Mrs. Jerry Wessel installed the new officers.

Mrs. J. H. Scott presented the poem back to the president. Mrs. Catherine Nelson gave a brief history of the club and presented a certificate to Mrs. H. A. Clegg, a charter member of the original Bay View Club.

Mrs. Adrian Artholony, chairman of the festival, gave thanks to the committee, including Mrs. G. L. Jurgens, Mrs. J. H. Scott, Mrs. R. W. Watkins, Mrs. Kenneth Garner Jr. and Mrs. Ray Murphy.

Mrs. Artholony introduced Harold Bruno of Springfield, who served in the Peace Corps. He presented the program, "Four Years in India". Mr. Bruno is a former Chandlerville resident and the grandson of Mrs. Emma Lynn of Chandlerville.

The entire festival was done in the Indian motif. The meeting concluded with the president naming committees for the new year.

Prescription Prices Down 10%
While Cost Of Living Climbs

The cost of most consumer goods and services climbed dramatically during the past decade, according to the Consumer Price Index of the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. The only notable exception was the cost of prescription drugs which declined 10% during the 10 year period.

According to the Index, cost of medical care increased 60% from 1960 through 1970. Food away from home increased 57%, housing went up 40%, both apparel and transportation rose 30%, personal care climbed 29%, and the price of food for home consumption increased 27%.

Commenting on the reduction in prescription drug prices, Wilford B. Simmons, executive secretary of the National Association of Retail Druggists, said that both retail pharmacists and pharmaceutical manufacturers can be proud of their record in reducing prices during the inflationary period. "This achievement is especially remarkable in view of continuing improvements in drugs which control and cure disease, relieve pain, and extend lives for Americans everywhere," he added.

Religious Communes Grow Across Country

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Religious communes involving both couples and single individuals are mushrooming across the country, says a Baptist minister of the movement.

"Hundreds of them have started up in the last three years and they're spreading so fast you can't keep track of them," said the Rev. John A. McDonald of Mill Valley, Calif.

He is chairman of a recently organized group, Evangelicals Concerned Inc., which has about 75 staff workers around the country helping guide the Christian commune development.

"The houses reflect a tremendous diversity," he said in an interview here at last week's American Baptist Convention.

"The spirit is as high in them that it's infectious and they tend to produce spin-off organizations of other communes."

He cited estimates that there were about 600 of them in California alone and hundreds of others in Florida and areas of Atlanta, Ga.; Houston, Tex.; Detroit, Mich.; Boston, Mass.;

New York City; Seattle, Wash.; and widely through the Midwest.

"It's a movement on a wide front," he said. "There's a spontaneity about it all over the country. Many believe that the Holy Spirit is leading it."

He said the houses ordinarily involve a mixture of Christian leader or couple, called elders, who then bring others into a close communal setting of concern, such as dropout-type young people, newly turned on to Christ.

"It gives them a basic spiritual family and a love many of them have never experienced," he said.

The Rev. Mr. McDonald, 50, pastor of the Mill Valley First Baptist church, was involved dubiously at first in organizing what is considered the country's first such Christian commune, "The House of Acts" in San Francisco in 1967. He has since written a book about it by that title.

Although it has closed, its participants, and passing visitors to it have started other communal houses elsewhere.

He said the religious houses had a high moral code and most of them maintained daily schedules of prayer and Bible studies and share in the upkeep.

"It's cheaper for a group to live under one roof than live al-

Hospital Board Working With Medical Society

As plans for expansion of hospital facilities and services near completion, trustees of the Passavant Memorial Area Hospital Association at their regular meeting May 17 reaffirmed their intention to use the Norris building as a vital part of the community's integrated health care program. They also voted to cooperate with members of the Morgan-Scott Medical Society who are exploring ways to improve the local health care delivery system.

The physicians' group is studying methods of shifting emphasis from expensive inpatient hospital care to less expensive treatment for ambulatory patients who do not require 24-hour nursing care in the hospital.

The trustees agreed to cooperate fully with the medical group in implementing such a program.

During discussion of future use of the Norris building, Earl Floreth, president of the board, said Norris is a valuable asset which enables the hospital system to utilize modern medical developments by offering more

University High Star Hubbard Headed For ISU

BLOOMINGTON — Illinois State basketball coach Will Robinson has announced that University High School's basketball career scoring leader, Selby Hubbard, has signed a national letter of intent to enroll at ISU this fall.

The 6-foot-5 Hubbard scored 1,029 points in his three-year varsity career at U High.

He averaged 15 points per game last season for a balanced U High squad that posted a 27-3 record and reached the first round of the Illinois High School state tournament before losing to Danville.

U High, coached by Robert Metcal, won Corn Belt Conference championships the past two seasons.

Hubbard was a first-team pick for CBC and Intercity (Bloomington-Normal) all-star teams as a junior when he averaged 14.7 points per game, and was a second-team selection on both squads this past season.

A fast, accurate shooter, Hubbard made 45.3 per cent of his field goal attempts and set a school record 82.9 per cent of his free throw attempts last season. He also grabbed 233 rebounds, an average of 9.7 per game.

The 180-pound Hubbard, an outstanding flanker back on U High's undefeated football team, also is regarded as a fine defensive player.

"This is a man who can play either inside or outside," ISU coach Robinson said. "On the college level, we expect that Selby will be most effective outside. He's likely to be one of the swing men in our offense."

Meminger Signs Pact With Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — Dean Meminger, 6-foot All-American guard from Marquette University, signed a three-year, no-cut contract Thursday with the New York Knicks for a reported $250,000.

He was the No. 1 draft choice of the National Basketball Association club.

"We feel we were very lucky to get him," Ned Irish, president of the Knicks, said at the formal announcement at Madison Square Garden.

"We hope to use Dean to spell Dick Barnett, so that Dick won't have to play 40 minutes a game. Barnett has some good years left and we want to preserve them."

"I feel younger already," said Barnett, who was a guest at Meminger's coming out party. Barnett is 34.

A former Rice High School star in New York City, Meminger topped Marquette in scoring in all three of his varsity seasons, racking up 1,457 points, the second highest in the university's history.

He was named the Most Valuable Player of the National Invitation Tournament in 1970 when the Warriors won the NIT championship.

During Meminger's career with Coach Al McGuire's team, Marquette compiled a won-loss record of 79-4. Last season, Marquette had a 30-0 mark and added a first round victory in the NCAA championship for a 30-game winning streak over two years.

Meminger was picked in the seventh round by Indiana of the rival American Basketball Association, but, according to Dean, he never had a thought of going to the ABA club.

500 In Class By Itself

By BOB COCHENAR

To begin with, don't ever call it "The Indy."

After all, if any motor race can be considered dignified (tradition does count as an event in dignity) it is the Indianapolis 500. "Indy" smacks of the crass and the commonplace. Besides, the 500 is serious.

It is inextricably entwined with a kind of Midwestern machismo which makes even a mildly negative attitude toward the race somewhat dangerous, at least within a 50-mile radius of ground zero on race day.

Why this should be so, even after more than 50 years, is something for the philosophers to debate. In Indiana, May 18 on middle America is infected with the spirit and on race day, even effete Easterners emerge from their cocoons and say to each other, knowingly, "Andretti is bound to do it again." ## Your family's silent partner Lying there on the doorstep, it can't speak. Or Move. Or Hear. But upon it in your hands and it becomes a living, powerful partner in daily living. In the decisions you make, the opinions you form.

It takes you to the highest chambers of government. It takes you to the bloodiest streets of warring countries. It takes you to the heart of history in the making. In short, it tells you what in the world is happening and why.

But people depend on it for needs beyond the need to know. It's where families turn when something's to be bought or sold. It's where hints on health, cooking, religion, amusements, dressmaking, etiquette, marriage are found.

It's where charities first turn for help, and a place where a letter to the editor is published. It's where campaigns are fought and lost dogs are found. It's where criminals are exposed and newlyweds applauded. Where birth and death meet on the same page.

It's your newspaper, silent partner of the family, yet one that says so much, does so much for so many people — every day without fail.

Charge Russ Cut Lobster Gear On U.S. Boat

BOSTON (AP) — A U.S. lobster boat said a Soviet fishing trawler cut through its lobster gear early today, only hours after American and Russian officials met at sea to discuss alleged harassment of Yankee lobstermen.

Following the five-hour meeting Wednesday aboard a Russian ship, a State Department spokesman said the behavior of the 120-veeled Russian fleet in the next three weeks would determine whether the meeting was successful.

Today's charge was made by the Westport-based Pat-San-Marie, which last weekend also reported Soviet bloc boats tore loose her lobster gear.

The Pat-San-Marie told the Coast Guard 18 foreign trawlers crisscrossed through her lobster gear through the night about 30 miles south of Nantucket Lightship.

The area is about 30 miles from the site of Wednesday's Russian-American parley.

The Coast Guard ordered the cutter Active to investigate the Pat-San-Marie report. The Active had been on patrol nearby.

Business — Market Wrapup

Business Mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A somewhat paradoxical, often contradictory and always revealing commentary continues to flow from those individuals and institutions thought to be authorities on profits, competition and the American way.

Earlier comments include Henry Ford II on the inability of the nation's automotive industry to stem the tide of imports, and Edwin Gott, U.S. Steel chairman, on the need for protective quotas on imported steel.

They also included rather grim views by leaders of the casualty insurance industry on the inability to make profits on certain business, by oil industry spokesmen on the inevitability of foreign imports increasing, by the railroad industry on the hopelessness of maintaining passenger service.

"Add spokesmen for the aerospace industry, where one large company recently lost government assistance in funding a supersonic commercial transport, and where another now seeks a $250 million loan guarantee because otherwise the banks won't lend it any more money."

From William Wilson, vice president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., which seeks the loan guarantee:

"Insufficient financing for the L1011 TriStar would force cancellation of the transport program, and Lockheed would be forced into bankruptcy through its inability to meet the huge obligations it already has incurred."

Bankruptcy, Lockheed said, "could cause great confusion, abrogation or alteration of agreements, greatly increased costs on government programs, and displacements and future hazards for Lockheed employees and more than 60,000 shareholders and bondholders."

"And more on steel, from Hendrik S. Houthakker, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, after studying the profit-inched but still powerful steel industry."

"The inability of steel to raise productivity, he suggested, may not be the wage demands of unions but could be a 'result of the fact that competition isn't as much as it could be.'"

"The industries that are finding competition in a free enterprise economy to be a bit distasteful include the mightiest in the land: Automotive, oil, aerospace, rails, insurance, steel. What conclusions should be drawn? It may be too early to say with any authority, but one thing is certain, these are unusually troubled times for some of America's largest industries if not for the entire system."

FUNNY BUSINESS

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted higher Thursday in fairly moderate trading as bargain hunters continued nibbling at issues depressed by the sharp drop earlier this week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained 3.37 points to 923.41. Earlier in the day, the Dow was up more than 6 points, but buying enthusiasm waned.

Analysts said the upturn was an extension of Wednesday's modest rally, when investors began showing interest in some of the more heavily oversold issues. The Dow average had fallen some 17 points Monday and Tuesday.

Investor morale also received something of a boost, analysts continued, from Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur F. Burns' statement the United States would not raise interest rates at home to help ease the international monetary situation.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 13.34 million shares, up from 11.74 million shares Wednesday.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks climbed 0.14 to 55.79.

Of the 1,843 stocks traded on the Big Board, 739 advanced, and 618 declined. There were 35 new highs and 45 new lows.

Rubber issues, aircraft, electronics, and metals were generally higher. Steels, mail order, retail, utilities, chemicals, rails, oils, and airlines were mixed. Motors were unchanged.

The Associated Press 80-stock average 0.9 at 32.4, with industrials up 1.3, rails up 0.3, and utilities up 0.6.

Eighty-six large blocks were traded on the New York Stock Exchange, compared with 72 blocks Wednesday. On the American Stock Exchange, 9 large blocks were traded, down from 12 Wednesday.

CNA Financial was most active on the Big Board, up 1 to 23 1/2. Most of the activity came from a 608,800 share block which changed hands at the same price.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index gained 0.05 to 25.92. Of the 1,125 stocks traded, 450 advanced, and 383 declined. Volume totaled 3.86 million shares, compared with 3.30 million shares Wednesday.

Cooking Is Fun Pork Chops Glazed With Molasses, Orange Juice

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DINNER FOR FOUR

Pork Chops with Fruit Yams
Chopped Broccoli Salad
Vanilla Custard Beverage
PORK CHOPS WITH FRUIT

Iron-rich light molasses combines with orange juice to make a glaze.
4 loin pork chops, about 1/2 inch thick
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 medium or large apple, pared, cored and sliced
1 large orange, peeled and sliced
1/4 cup raisins
1/4 cup light molasses
1/4 cup orange juice
Sprinkle chops with salt and pepper; brown in oil. Arrange half the apple and orange slices and all the raisins in a shallow baking dish into which the chops just fit; top fruit with chops. Place remaining apple slices on chops and cover with orange slices. Mix molasses and orange juice and pour over chops. Cover tightly with foil and bake in a 350-degree oven 50 minutes; if liquid evaporates during this time add a little orange juice. Uncover, baste and bake 10 minutes longer. Makes 4 servings.

Soviets Launch Space Shot Toward Mars

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Thursday it has launched a space shot toward Mars and expects it to reach the planet next November.

Named Mars-2 and described as an automatic interplanetary station, the probe was launched in the Soviet Union Wednesday at 7:23 p.m., the official news agency Tass reported.

The United States had scheduled two attempts to photograph Mars closeup this year, but one failed early in its mission.

"The flight of the interplanetary station Mars-2 to the planet Mars will continue for more than six months, Tass said.

The wording did not clarify whether the space station would attempt a soft landing on Mars.

A Moscow radio announcement said the station weighs more than four tons and will cover a distance of nearly 300 million miles to reach the vicinity of Mars.

The Soviet Union's first spaceshot aimed at Mars was Mars-1 launched in November 1962.

Koster Lawyer Raps Demotion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army broke Samuel W. Koster to brigadier general "to mollify those segments of society who feel you can't convict lieutenant and let the generals go free," his attorney charges.

"Apparently they were willing to sacrifice one general," Brendan V. Sullivan said in accusing the Army of "acting on the political exigencies of the moment."

Part of the public outcry following the conviction last month of Lt. William L. Calley Jr., involved charges the Army was making him the scapegoat for the My Lai massacre while letting higher-ranking officers escape punishment.

Calley, so far the only man convicted in the case, is appealing a life sentence for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians.

Twenty-five officers and enlisted men originally were charged either with crimes at My Lai or with covering up the incident.

Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor Wednesday ordered the 51-year-old Koster demoted from major general, censured and stripped of his Distinguished Service Medal for not thoroughly investigating the My Lai incident while American Division commander in March 1968.

Koster's assistant at the time, Brig. Gen. George H. Young Jr., 50, also was censured and his DSM revoked.

But Resor allowed him to retain his rank against the recommendation of Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff.

In an interview, Sullivan said Koster, currently assigned to Ft. Meade, Md., "is not going to retire at this time" and may fight Resor's action in the federal courts. There is no avenue of appeal in the military for this form of nonjudicial punishment.

The Army previously had dismissed criminal charges accusing the two generals of covering up the My Lai incident.

QUEEN ASKS ALLOWANCE INCREASE

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has asked Parliament for the first increase in the allowance for herself and other members of the royal family since she became sovereign 19 years ago.

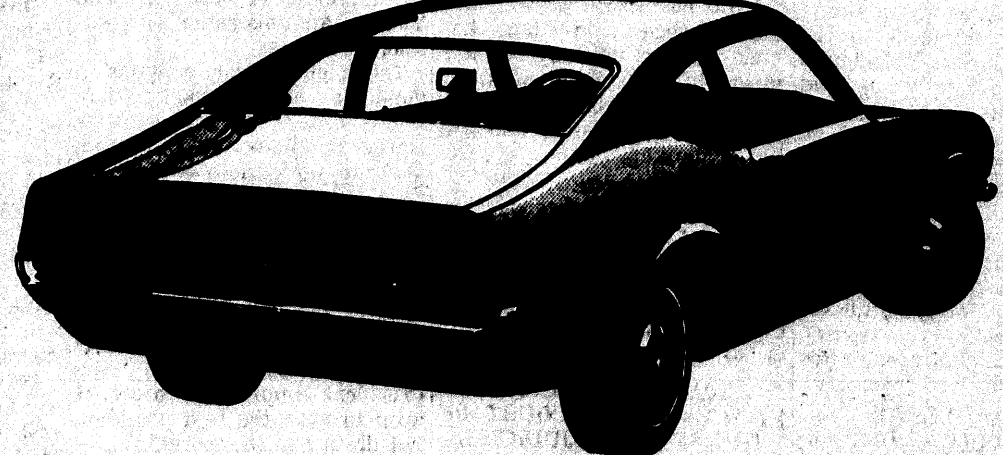

"Her majesty regrets that developments in the intervening years have made that provision inadequate for the maintenance of that standard of service to her people to which she believes they wish her and her family to adhere," her message said.

Court sources said the queen now receives $1.02 million annually and needs about $1.02 million. She offered to give up $144,000 that Parliament allots her annually for purely personal expenses.

AEC To Test A-Bomb For Peaceful Use

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission is getting ready to test the first atomic bomb designed to be mass produced for peaceful use in the United States.

The bomb is designed to fracture sandstone formations found under several Western states and release natural gas trapped in the rock. The AEC says such devices could ultimately double the nation's dwindling natural gas reserve.

The device will be tested here at the Nevada Test Site in early June under the code name Minutia. If all goes well, test and production shots could begin next year.

A. Dean Thornborough, director of the AEC's office of peaceful nuclear explosives, said in an interview Wednesday that the Minutia device, about 9 inches wide and 30 feet long, is designed to release very little radioactivity.

When atomic explosions are used in gas production the chief by-product of concern is tritium, a radioactive isotope of hydrogen. Combined with the methane in natural gas, tritium could be carried into the home, released when the gas is burned and absorbed by people.

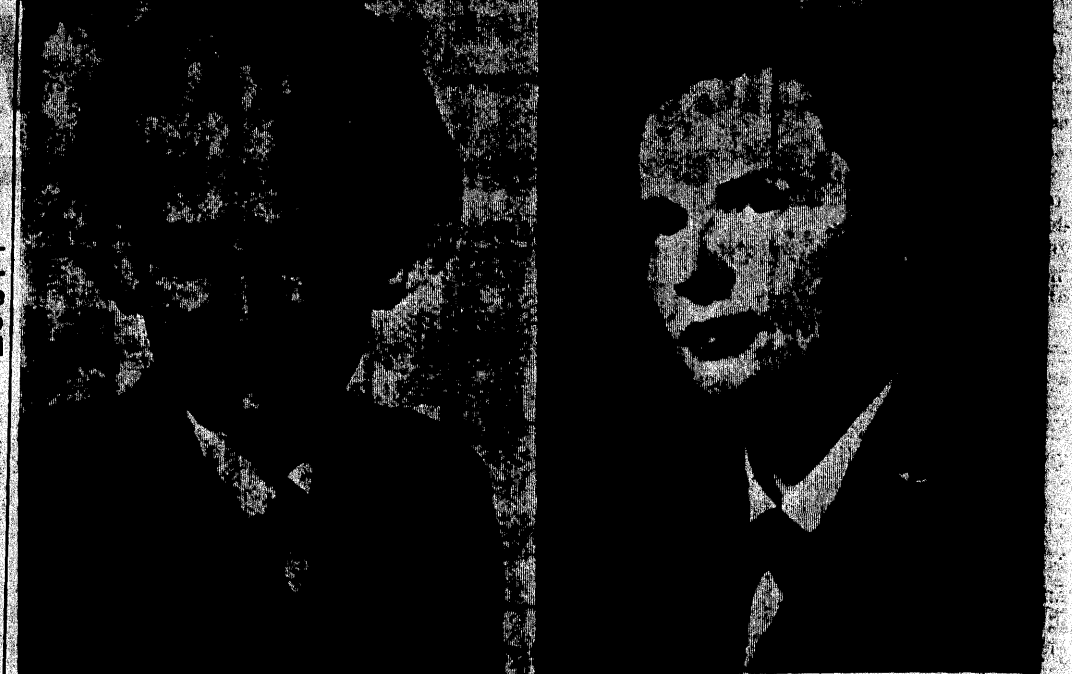

Minutia will release less than one-tenth the tritium produced by any previous nuclear explosive, Thornborough said, and some of those devices were designed to reduce tritium release.

"The use of the gas in a home should not produce more than a small fraction of the background radiation that you get just from living where you live," he said.

Thornborough said the Minutia device is much smaller in diameter than previous nuclear devices and is engineered to slide down the standard pipe used to drill natural gas fields.

CER Geonuclear Corp., a consortium of major oil and natural gas companies, wants to develop a natural gas field in western Colorado using nuclear explosives, with a schedule of 25 to 40 production shots within five years.

El Paso Natural Gas Co. has proposed a similar series of shots in the Green River Basin of western Wyoming.

Disclose Cost To Run LBJ Library Quadruples

By GAYLORD SHAW

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, which dwells in concept and cost all other presidential libraries, will cost the federal government four times more to operate than the figure given to the Congress that authorized the project.

Senate records and interviews with federal officials disclosed the quadrupled annual cost as President Nixon, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and members of Johnson's House majority prepared to fund for Secretary's Department of the Library on the University of Texas campus.

At that time, the General Services Administration will strongly take over the library's operation, maintenance and protection, adding them to the federal budget for collecting the 51 million documents and other materials including 800,000 still photographs left from Johnson's 32 years as president.

The government's total annual operating cost for the library will exceed $800,000, records and interviews disclosed, compared with an estimate of $190,000 given to Congress in 1966 when it passed authorizing legislation.

The eight-story library is part of a campus complex constructed by the University of Texas under a single contract for a total cost of $15.5 million.

Archives officials said no federal funds were used in the library's construction. However, university officials said the school's share was $15.5 million with the rest coming from the federal treasury; a $2.6 million grant plus $270,000 in GSA funds.

Records show the Office of Education awarded the $3.6 million grant a year before Johnson left office to help the university construct what was then described as the "East Campus Library and Research Building."

Office of Education officials say the grant was for a three-story building adjacent to the presidential library. This building, known formally as the Lyndon Baines Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Because a single construction contract was let for both the library and Richardson Hall, university officials said there is no way of separating costs for each building. However, an Office of Education spokesman said the $2.6 million grant "was not made for the archives. It was to be used for academic purposes only."

"No politics were involved," the official insisted. "Just because he was in the White House didn't make a bit of difference."

Records show the National Archives fiscal 1971 allocation of $970,000 for the Johnson Library was more than double what it spent on any of the other libraries, and far outstripped original estimates.

Asked what caused the increase, Archivist Daniel J. Boorstin, who heads the Office of Presidential Libraries, replied, "I don't know. Inflation, federal salary increases, I guess."

But Archivist James B. Rhoads said in an interview the early estimate did not take into account the scope of the Johnson papers.

"Back in 1966 no one had a realistic view of just how massive the collection would be," he said. "They knew it would be large, but they didn't know how large."

"The best bench mark we had in 1966 was what the Roosevelt, Eisenhower and Truman libraries were costing us, and $190,000 would have been somewhat more than liberal at that time."

So extensive are the Johnson papers that the Archives spent more than $1.5 million in fiscal 1970 through 1971 just sorting them for placement in the library.

This work is continuing under a $600,000 appropriation for fiscal 1972 and the Archives plans to spend the same amount in fiscal 1973 to support a staff of 30, Rhoads said.

The $600,000 does not include costs of maintaining, protecting and operating the library building itself, all functions to be performed by the GSA's Public Buildings Service at a cost of $3.02 a square foot, or $303,000 annually, a GSA spokesman said.

Preliminary planning for the library began in 1964, and construction started while Johnson was still in the White House. Completed this year, the block-like structure of Italian travertine marble is 20 per cent larger than any other presidential library.

The first and second floors are devoted to public exhibits of the Johnson era, ranging from his daughters' wedding dresses to political cartoons dating to the 1930s.

The third through seventh floors, to be restricted to scholars and researchers, contain papers and memorabilia collected by the Johnsons since he entered federal service in 1935 as director of the National Youth Administration's operations in Texas.

The eighth floor contains a duplicate of Johnson's White House office. Library Director Harry Middleton said Johnson plans to work there part of the time, particularly when going over papers in the library.

Both the former president and Mrs. Johnson were active in planning and gathering materials for the library. One Johnson aide recalled that during the early stages, "The President simply said to me, 'I want to have the best presidential library in the world.'"

Leslie Bacon Cited For Contempt

SEATTLE (AP) — Leslie Bacon has been cited for contempt of court and jailed for refusing to answer a federal grand jury's question about the U.S. Capitol bombing despite being granted limited immunity.

Bacon, 19-year-old anti-war activist, was ordered jailed by Judge William Goodwin "for the life of the grand jury," which ends next March, or until she answers the questions.

Her attorneys contended the limited immunity from prosecution granted Wednesday was too narrow. They said they would appeal Goodwin's ruling to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

NIXON PROCLAIMS JUNE 30TH AS FATHER'S DAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has proclaimed Sunday, June 30, as Father's Day.

"A man does not need to be applauded or given a citation for being a good father," the President's proclamation said Wednesday. "Fatherhood is its own reward."

"But it is appropriate that the nation pause every so often to recognize the contribution which the fathers of America have made to their families, their communities and their country."

DRIVER CHARGED AFTER HIT-RUN

A hit-run accident was reported to city police at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday by Yolande Voder of Murrayville which took place at the intersection of South Main and Morton.

The told investigating authorities that the other car left the scene of the accident.

At 11:15 p.m., state police brought to city police headquarters Steven P. Piper, 23, of White Hall, who was ticketed for failure to give information and render aid at the scene of the accident.

Piper posted his driver's license and was released for a court appearance later.

Minor damage resulted to both vehicles.

Circled Globe

The first around-the-world voyage by any American battle force was the voyage of the "great white fleet" of the U.S. Navy in 1907-1909. President Theodore Roosevelt had a deal plan to give the fleet unique training and to show the world the power that had defeated Spain.

The Will Rogers Shrine of the Sun, built in memory of the American humorist by his friend Spencer Penrose, overlooks Colorado Springs from Cheyenne Mountain.

SOUTH RIFES AGAIN very far south—in Australia. Relees of America's Civil War surrounded Adrian L. Pearce, 30, of Sydney, president of the Australian branch of the Confederate Historical Society. The group is small, about 15 members, but intense in its interest in the century-old conflict.

Blackman 'Bible' Totals 788 Pages

CHAMPAIGN — The football gospel according to new University of Illinois Coach Bob Blackman has been recorded in two volumes. It totals 788 pages and weighs 14.5 pounds.

"We call it the Bible with volume one for the offense and volume two for the defense," joked John Nelson, offensive line coach.

Blackman's "Bible" really consists of the 476-page offensive play book and the 312-page defensive play book. The offensive book is divided into 30 categories and weighs 10 pounds. The defensive book is divided into 30 categories and weighs 4.5 pounds.

Each squad member has a copy of his part of Blackman's "Bible." Every movement by every player is described in detail. Nothing is left to chance.

"It's a very impressive thing," observed defensive end Bob Bucklin, a 6-foot-1, 235-pound senior-to-be who was a second-team Academic All-American selection last season. "I find it pretty precise, and I think it makes the system a lot easier to learn when everything is spelled out in such detail."

Volume two contains specific information for each type of defender, as well as outlining Blackman's eight major defenses. It includes a glossary of 44 different calls for the linebackers to yell to teammates once the opposition offense comes to the line of scrimmage.

It breaks down the basic strategy for the front four, the linebacker corps and the defensive back contingent. It even includes a five-page bulletin on tackling and how the players may improve this important part of the over-all defense on their own at home over the summer break.

"It's not all that complicated, but it is something different," Bucklin continued. "It is just a matter of getting used to the system. Each man has his own assignments and there are many, many complications that have to be considered. It makes the defensive people think when they're on the field. You definitely have to think to play it."

Defensive tackle Tab Bennett, a 6-2, 260-pound junior-to-be from Miami, Fla., described the new Illinois defense as "versatile and flexible enough to equally challenge any offense we may encounter next fall."

Bennett, one of 11 defensive starters returning from last season, added: "It's really not so complicated. It's a very disciplined defensive system. It's like a chain in that it has different links, but unlike a chain it will not break if one link is broken."

Like many of the Illinois players, Bennett admits he's not completely comfortable in his position. "I haven't learned my position the way I want to learn it. I've got new responsibilities in comparison to the defense we played last year. I learned more and more about the system each day in spring practice, and I'm sure I'll be much more aware of the system when we come back next fall. One thing is certain, though, our defensive system is going to keep a lot of opposing coaches at the drawing board."

Blackman's new system does not get any easier offensively. For example, the Illinois put in over three dozen plays in the six practice sessions between the first spring intra-squad game at Springfield April 23 and the second intra-squad game at Peoria May 4.

"The first several weeks of practice, the new system seemed extremely complicated," observed veteran quarterback Mike Wells, a 6-5, 215-pound junior-to-be from Normal (Community). "At first I thought it would be too much to learn and had my doubts whether I'd be able to learn it all."

"But as practice went along, it became easier and easier. Things have fallen into place. From a quarterback's standpoint, I can set up the offense and know exactly where every man will be and there are certain keys which uncomplicate the whole system. Every one knows exactly what his job is and where the ball will be at all times."

Volume one of Blackman's "Bible," details in depth the 13 series of offenses the Illinois will use next fall. The responsibilities for players at each offensive position are outlined and illustrated with diagrams. Blocking rules for the offensive team are explained totally on a position-by-position basis. Blackman's offense includes 14 different types of blocking and a chapter is devoted to each type.

Sixteen pages alone are devoted to the over-all kicking game, while a general preface outlining the Blackman philosophy of the multiple offense covers 43 pages.

"I've never been involved with an offense that compares to this one," Wells continued. "The system is designed and described in detail to beat any type of defense an opponent is likely to use against us. And I'm sure a lot more of the offense is to be put in before our first game next fall. (Sept. 11 at Michigan State). It's without a doubt the most complicated offense I've seen anywhere, but I think the team is getting things to fall into place."

To the more than a dozen Illinois who have switched positions under the new Blackman system, getting things to fall into place has not been an instant success. Said Chillothe product Mason Minnes, a 6-0, 225-pounder who is a strong challenger for a starting offensive guard spot after playing fullback last season:

"I'm beginning to enjoy myself more. I know the adjustment from running with the ball to blocking for the ball carrier would take time. I did have trouble at first learning the plays, but I'm getting it together. I've still got a little trouble with my technique."

Minnes admitted he was a little fearful of moving to guard from fullback. "Nobody wants to jump out of a spot they've played since high school and try a new position," he said. "It didn't take long to realize the coaches know what they're doing in making the position switches they did."

Although the highly-successful spring practice concluded May 15 at Memorial Stadium in Champaign with the annual Orange-Blue game, most of the players will spend considerable time on their own this summer memorizing different passages of scripture — Scripture Blackman-style, that is.

Cubs Blow 6-2 Lead, Giants Net 8-7 Edge

CHICAGO (AP) — Willie McCovey's three-run homer in the ninth inning enabled the San Francisco Giants to come from behind and defeat the Chicago Cubs 8-7 Thursday.

McCovey's ninth homer of the campaign followed walks to Tito Fuentes and Willie Mays and put the Giants in front 8-6.

The Cubs, who had two homers by Ron Santo, led 6-2 in the eighth when the Giants scored three times on pinch-hitter Frank Healy's bases-filled double.

Chicago tagged Juan Marichal, the Giants' starter, for 11 hits, including Billy Williams' run-producing single which chased the ace right-hander in the seventh inning.

San Francisco touched Ken Holtzman for two runs in the second on Ken Henderson's single, an infield out, a double by Alan Gallagher and Hal Lanier's sacrifice fly.

Santo hit his first homer of the game in the third following singles by Don Kessinger and Glenn Beckert.

Midgets, Stocks

Top USAC Slate

SPEEDWAY, Ind. — Two midget races and one stock car race will highlight this week's United States Auto Club racing activities.

The mighty midgets will run Friday night at the Santa Fe Speedway at Hixdale, Ill., and Saturday night at the Shady Bowl Speedway at DeGraff, Ohio. The stockers will have a two-day event at the K-K Speedway at Kaukauna, Wis., qualifying on Saturday and the race on Sunday.

In this past week's results, Danny Caruthers, younger brother of midget champ Jimmy Caruthers, topped a 100-mile midget field, while Jack Bowser topped the Tri-County stock show and Sammy Swenson took over the sprint point lead with a win at Indianapolis Raceway Park.

State Track Marks Appear In Jeopardy

CHAMPAIGN — Eight of the 15 records in the Illinois State Intercollegiate Track and Field Championships will be in perilous positions when a record 800 athletes from 232 schools converge on Memorial Stadium May 23-29 for the 77th renewal of the state's prep extravaganza.

Defending champion Evanston, which qualified 13 individuals and both relay teams, appears to be the team to beat, but Chicago Englewood, Lombard Glenbard East, East Moline and Alton pose serious threats.

Chicago-area schools have captured 61 of 76 titles since the meet began in 1902 and only Alton and Moline have won titles from the northern part of the state from taking the championship every year since 1935. Moline won in 1960, while Alton has capped the crown in 1963, '64 and '69.

Glenbard East qualified the largest contingent with 14 individuals and both relay teams. Evanston and Englewood followed with 13 and two, East Moline and Springfield South-east each qualified 11 individuals and two relays. Chicago Lane Tech and LaGrange Lyons qualified 10 and both relays, while Alton, Chicago Heights Bloom and Decatur MacArthur have nine individuals and both relay teams entered. Moline qualified eight individuals and one relay team.

Five defending titles return, while a large number of place winners last spring are back. Evanston's sectional sprinter Howard Jones and New Lenox Lincoln-Way's Dave Marwick head the list of potential champions. Jones won the 100-yard and 200-yard dashes last year and will defend both. Marwick breezed to the two-mile victory in record time last year and is considered the favorite in both the mile and two-mile this season. Under a change in rules by the Illinois High School Association, distance runners will be allowed to compete in both the mile and two-mile this year.

Three-fourths of Evanston's winning 880-yard relay team will be back and the fourness of Joe Stewart, Gary Sharkey, Warren Allen and Jones posted the best district time in the event at 1:52.3. Moline's 1:57.1 in 1967 is the state record. Alton took the mile relay last year and two members of that unit, Lester "Bo" Smith and Milton Johnson, helped the Redbirds produce the third-fastest district time.

Records in the two-mile, 100-yard high hurdles, 100-yard dash, 100-yard low hurdles, 200-yard dash, mile and pole vault plus the 800 relay, will be in jeopardy.

Three of the six finalists in the 100 yard relay return with Alton's Gale Murphy and Chicago Lane Tech's Gerald Smith. Jones, Murphy took third last spring and Smith posted times of :59.5 in district competition, but Chicago St. Ignace's Ted Edwards recorded a district-best :59.3. The state record is :58.6.

Jones is the lone returnee from the final six in the 200 where he set the state record of :23.6 in Friday's preliminaries. He ran a :21.5 in the final, but the mark was disallowed because of an aiding wind. His :21.5 in district com-

Rico Petrocelli Boosts Red Sox Over Yankees 5-2

BOSTON (AP) — Rico Petrocelli capped a three-run first inning with his third home run in four games and the Boston Red Sox went on to defeat the New York Yankees 5-2 Thursday.

It was Boston's 19th victory in 24 games.

New York loser Stan Bahnsen, 1-4, struck out Boston leadoff batter Luis Aparicio, but Reggie Smith walked and came all the way around as Carl Yastrzemski sliced a double off the left field wall.

Petrocelli followed with his fifth homer, a line shot high into the screen in left center.

Boston outpawed Bill Lee, making first start in a year, checked the Yankees until the sixth. Then Danny Gator drove in a run on a sacrifice fly and Felipe Alou scored another with a bloop single.

Lee, 4-1, walked the next two batters before giving way to reliever Bob Bolin, who needed only one pitch to get Curt Bleasdale for the final out.

Boston added two more runs in the eighth.

Talbert: Says Tennis Players Have Outgrown Game

NEW YORK (AP) — The big serve-and-volley game in tennis may be great for the Red Lobster and Arthur Ashe, says William F. Talbert, but it's a sleeping potion for the spectators.

"There's not doubt about it, the players have outgrown the game," the trim, youthful-looking basketball executive, former Davis Cup player and captain, said Thursday. "If tennis is to become a major spectator sport, it must produce a more exciting spectacle."

Talbert's personal prescription: Change the rules so that the server must take one ball on a bounce before proceeding to the net.

"We'll Madison Square Garden advertising a match between Rod Laver and Pancho Gonzalez," he continued. "The fans see Gonzalez serve, go to the net—boom, boom—and the point is over. Soon they are bored to death."

"The spectators want to see exchanges and rallies. They don't want to see a man put the ball away on the first shot. They want him to work his way to the net."

Talbert, 32, who has won 38 national titles in a career that has seen him advance from Davis Cup player to Davis Cup captain to chairman and director of the U.S. Open Championships this year at Forest Hills, is one of the most progressive and strident voices in a sport that has been tied to its 1890 court strings.

It was he who pushed through the sudden death scoring system last year at Forest Hills—the most radical tennis change in 70 years and a move copied in modified form this year by Wimbledon.

He is in favor of stripping tennis of its fuddy-duddy business and petticoats and putting it in hot pants.

"I don't see any reason for repeated admonitions to the spectators to keep quiet," he said. "If a fan gets excited, let him scream. The pressure is no greater than on a pitcher in a baseball game facing a 3-2 count on a dangerous hitter."

Two-Day Power Boat Regatta Set In Decatur

DECATUR — Lake Decatur at Decatur will again be the site that is expected to draw 30,000 persons to watch the Fourth Annual Memorial Day Weekend Water Festival. The two-day Power Boat Regatta is sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association and will attract top racing drivers and boat owners from throughout the United States.

Both days of racing will have feature events this year. On Sunday, May 30, The Millikin National Bank of Decatur is sponsoring the world's first grand prix between hydroplanes and runabouts. The winner will receive a $500 silver perpetual trophy and a share of the $300 purse.

Feature event on Memorial Day will be "The Bill South Memorial Grand Prix for Hydroplanes" which carries $500 in prize money and a perpetual trophy.

The races both days will be run on a 1.3-mile surveyed course which is approved for world's records. Drivers can qualify for National Point Standing of the American Power Boat Association and points will also be awarded for the North American Cup.

Entries will include nine classes of inboard hydroplanes and two classes of outboard pleasure craft. A fast-paced program on both days calls for races approximately every 15 minutes.

The judge's stand will be at the City of Decatur Boat Dock Basin at Nelson Park. Out-of-town visitors will be directed to the racing areas by signs posted along all major highways leading to Decatur.

The Regatta is sponsored by the Decatur Water Festival Corporation and is primarily supported by the voluntary contributions of Decatur citizens and local business firms. Visitors will have the opportunity to contribute one dollar per family to help defray expenses if they wish, but there will be no admission charge and any donation is strictly voluntary.

Montreal Tops Atlanta, 4-3 In 14 Innings

ATLANTA (AP) — John Boccabella's lead off home run in the 14th inning sent the Montreal Expos to a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves Thursday night.

Boccabella's blast greeted the Braves' third pitcher, Ron Herbel, 0-1.

Hot-hitting Ralph Garr had tied the game 3-3 for Atlanta with a double in the fifth inning, scoring Cleto Boyer, who was on base with his third straight single.

The Braves had taken a 2-0 lead in the first when Sonny Jackson walked, went to third on a single by Garr, the National League's leading hitter, and scored on Felix Millan's sacrifice fly. Orlando Cepeda, on base with a force out bounce, later stole second and scored on Boyer's single.

Rusty Staub, who had doubled and moved to third on a single, scored on a wild pitch and Ron Fairley doubled home another run as Montreal tied it in the fourth.

Montreal starter Steve Renko got himself a brief 3-2 lead in the fifth, cracking a home run before the Braves tied it in their half.

Scoring in the last inning of play was the deciding factor in three contests as SPFF, Virginia and Bound To Stay Bound took the wins in the American Division of YMCA Open Six-Pitch play Thursday night at Nichols Park.

John Miller clouted a home run and Roger Blimling hit a triple that gave SPFF five runs in the top of the eighth for the 13-7 victory in extra innings over Carnation. Bill Hoon and Dick Parrish with home runs led the losers.

In the second game, Capitol Records scored nine runs in the bottom of the seventh, but it wasn't enough as Virginia held off for the 22-21 victory. Mike Goodall with a home run, triple and double paced the victors.

In the final game of the night, Bound To Stay Bound scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh for a narrow 11-10 win over Wareco. Dennis Zimmer and Terry Frye blasted home runs for BTSSB, while Andy Plantz and Bill Ankrum hit round trippers for Wareco.

McLarens Hold Big Advantage

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — "The McLarens have a bigger advantage than Parnelli Jones' STP turbine had in 1967," said Bobby Unser, who will start beside the Mark 16 McLarens of Peter Revson and Mark Donohue in the front row of the 25th 500-mile race May 29 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Vince Granatelli, who was Jones' chief mechanic in the 1967 race, nodded agreement.

"Look at the qualifying figures," said Unser, the 1968 Indy winner. Revson took the pole last Saturday at 178.698 miles an hour beating the 177.067 of Donohue, who had done over 180 in practice.

Bobby Unser did 175.816 in a Gurney Eagle with a turbo-charged Offenhauser engine similar to that used by the McLarens.

In 1967, Jones and his Pratt Whitney turbine engine were only the sixth-fastest qualifier at 165.075. Mario Andretti won the pole at 168.932 with a conventional engine but lost a wheel in the race.

Jones ran away from the field in the first lap and led A. J. Foyt Jr. by two miles when a bearing failed with 10 miles to go.

Vince Granatelli, whose brother Andy heads the STP gasoline and oil additive company, is still doing a slow burn over complaints that Jones was "sandbagging" in practice and qualifications for the 1967 race.

Sandbagging is deliberately turning one corner at relatively slow speed on each lap, varying the corner, in order to give deceptively low average speeds to observers. An easier, more obvious way is to hold down straightaway speeds.

"No driver is going to sandbag," Granatelli insisted, "getting ready for this race." Bobby Unser, chatting with the STP master mechanic during a Thursday shower, agreed.

The USAC committee since then has reduced the air intake area allowed turbine engines on two occasions, virtually taking them out of competition.

Not New Mantle, Just Old Murcer

BOSTON (AP) — The new Bobby Murcer isn't the new Mickey Mantle, after all. He's just the old Bobby Murcer.

After two years of trying to fill Mantle's shoes in center field and erase his home run records, as well, Murcer has stopped going for the long ball and is hitting the ball to all fields.

As a result, following Wednesday night's game against the Red Sox, statistics showed him hitting .374, second best in the American League.

"I never considered myself a home run hitter," said the 5-foot-11, 175-pound center fielder, who whacked 26 and 23 home runs the past two seasons but saw his average skid to .259 and .251. "In the minors I hit the ball everywhere."

Murcer arrived in New York for brief trials in 1965 and 1966 with a good deal of fanfare after hitting .365 and .322 in the minors. His lousy hitting and the fact that he's from Oklahoma, like Mantle, had local writers digging for rave adjectives.

After two years in service, Murcer started out 1969 not only like the next Mickey Mantle but like the next Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb, as well. He was hitting .321 with 11 homers and a league-leading 43 runs batted in when he jammed his heel in Kansas City.

"I laid out seven days and I lost my groove and my momentum," he recalled. "I just got discouraged and I tried to hit every ball out of the park."

Finally, despite the home runs, the left-hand-hitting Murcer got tired of all the soft grounders and weak popups when he tried to pull the steady diet of outside pitches he was being fed.

"I thought about changing all winter," he said. "I decided I was going to try it. It seemed logical. At Yankee Stadium most pitchers pitch you outside anyway and you see a lot of left-handers. I'd been going for home runs and pulling those outside pitches to the first baseman or second baseman."

"Until I have one strike I look for something in my power area. After that I go with the pitch. You might say I'm conscious of the outside pitch. I always thought I had pretty good bat control. I also decided to hunt more. The infielders always took hits away from me by playing back. I figure the home runs will come. All the ones I've hit this year came when I didn't expect them."

Canonero II Gets Rousing Reception

NEW YORK (AP) — Canonero II, who received about as much acclaim as a cheap allowance horse when he arrived in Kentucky for the Derby, got a reception befitting a celebrity Thursday when he showed up at Belmont Park for his shot at the Belmont Stakes and the Triple Crown.

Even after his Derby victory the Kentucky-bred Venezuelan-owned colt caused little excitement when he arrived in Baltimore for last Saturday's Preakness.

But as the Derby and Preakness winner and possibly racing's first Triple Crown winner in 23 years, Canonero II got a movie star or visiting statesman-style greeting from a horde of photographers and newsmen as he arrived by van from Pimlico for the June 5 Belmont.

"He's earned it," jockey Gustavo Avila said of the fuss being made over Canonero II as groom Pedro Quintero prepared him for his stay in Barn 7 in the sprawling, country-like Belmont stable area.

"This horse is very docile," said Quintero. "He's a good traveler. It was a very good trip."

While cameras clicked and whirled, inside and in front of Barn 7, all was quiet around Barn 36 where Host The Flag continues his recuperation.

Host The Flag was the big favorite to win the Derby and was regarded as a good bet to become a Triple Crown winner until the morning of March 31. On that morning, the racing world was shaken and the Triple Crown series apparently robbed of much of its glamor when Host The Flag suffered a broken leg which ended his racing career.

Now there is Canonero II and chances of the $1,200 yearling purchase doing what last was done by Citation in 1948 are rated excellent.

Not Cultivated
Maple trees are not cultivated to produce superior maple sugar. This is one product which nature had produced better than man. Trees must be grown from seed to produce good maple sugar; second-growth wood has poor sugar sap.

"Swan Song"
The belief that a dying swan sings a beautiful song arose behind the curtain of prehistory. Today, "swan song" is used to describe the final production of an artist or musician, or the end of a period.

NEA Sports Editor

CHICAGO (NEA) — One spring morning recently I stood behind the batting cage at Wrigley Field in my official capacity as sports writer. I was taking it, for really I was 11 years old and I knew that any minute an usher would escort me out of there by the scruff of the collar.

A ball rolled under the cage and I picked it up. It was still white but discolored by a bruise of brown and a stain of green. The red stitching stood out. For some unaccountable reason I smelled it. Pungent to the core. There is a distinct, unforgettable muskiness to the tanned horseshide of a baseball. Small being one of the greatest memory devices, it was so easy to be transported several yards and 20 years away to the moment I got my first big league baseball.

The day before, my friends and I had fought in the autograph jungle under the cool stands as the Cubs of these days, Andy Pafko, Roy Smalley, Hal Jaffcoat, Hank Sauer, emerged big and tanned and hair-licked from the clubhouse after the game.

Roy Johnson whom everyone called "Hardrock," came out. He was a leathery-looking coach; pigeon-toed, too, which gave away his humor under the gruff veneer. He was in a hurry, he said, and had no time to sign. I continued in hot pursuit. No, no, he persisted. In desperation he said, Come to the park tomorrow, kid, and I'll give you a ball, slamming his car door a millimeter from my finger.

I believed him. My friends were much too sophisticated. He was just givin' you the all, dope. It was not all that easy to fall asleep that night.

Armed with my lunch — with the usual soft fruit my mother packed carving a soggy hole in the bottom of the brown bag — I was off to Wrigley Field with my friends. They poked little jokes, even up to the time I left them in the grandstand seats. I ran down through the shadowy stands as the park began to fill, past vendors hawking peanuts, past the steamy hot dogs on portable grills.

I had come down to the short red brick wall along the first-base line. Straight out was No. 42, Hardrock Johnson, crackling fungus into the bright sky. I watched a ball drop through the clouds, down past the Baby Ruth billboard on the building across the street, get lost momentarily in the scattering of white shirts in the sunny bleachers and finally disappear silently into the outstretched glove of a fielder against the ivy-covered wall.

"Mr. Hardrock, sir," I called through cupped hands. No answer. I called again. "You promised me a ball yesterday, Mr. Hardrock, sir." Nothing, but the crack of his bat. "Just an old, dirty ball, Mr. Hardrock." The few adults seated nearby began to titter.

I'm not certain how long I kept this up, several minutes, surely. Soon, there was that predictable yank at the collar. I was explaining the situation to the grim usher when there came this great, throaty rumble, "Hey, kid!" Hardrock Johnson tossed me a ball in a long underhand toss. Up the stairs I flew.

They all wanted to see the ball, and I showed it to my friends. One by one—with me holding it. The ball created an uncomfortable wholly welcome bulge in the right front pocket of my blue jeans.

Home, I fondled the hard ball with the upraised stitching. I inspected the dirt and grass smudges closely, the Spalding trademark in a small baseball, the stars alongside "Official Ball, National League." The signature of Ford C. Frick, then League president, I smelled that tanned horseshide smell that has not changed in 20 years, that has not changed in 100 years.

Many suggestions were offered to get the ball as clean as new. The one that sold me was to put it in milk. I immersed the ball in a large bowl of milk for two days, periodically coming by and rolling it around with my finger to make sure no patch was left un milked.

When I finally removed it, the ball had turned a sick yellow. I mounted the ball on a shelf in my room, for awhile. But somehow it got out into the streets. Soon, one end was unstitched and became a flappy tongue and, shortly, the ball was reduced to a sphere of string.

At the batting cage now, I felt the red ridges against the smooth off-white horseshide. I slowly tossed the ball in the air a couple of times. I smelled it. Then casually squeezed the ball into my slink-pants pocket.

Mets Get Mileage From Tape Machine

By FRANK ECK
NEW YORK (AP) — When the New York Mets are on the road Billy Connors pitches batting practice and when they are home he shoots them.

The Mets, like many major league clubs, have their pitcher of the next day chart each pitch from the bench. Connors does more than this. At home games he stations himself in a box seat behind home plate and records on TV every pitch of the game.

The next day, hours before game time, he wheels his $6,000 handcrank playback type machine into the Met dressing room and anyone wishing to see "the curve ball that hung" or "the pitch that was right down the pipe," can do so without charge.

The way the Mets were winning one-run games on their recent home stand people were beginning to think they did it with mirrors. Actually they are winning because their pitchers had become students of the pitches taken by cameraman Connors.

Pitchers Nolan Ryan and Gary Gentry were watching pitches of the recent Chicago Cub game in which four National League umpires changed a decision three times on a Milt Pappas pitch that either hit Don Hahn in the shoulder or hit his bat. The machine was in the doorway.

"Wheel it in," said Manager Gil Hodges. "Can you play back that inning?"

"Yes, sir," said Connors and he quickly referred to his charts and pushed the correct button.

"Play it again," said Hodges.

The pictures showed that Hahn had squared away too soon, that he tried to bunt the ball down chest high inside, that he then checked his swing by pulling the bat back to his right shoulder, the point at which he says the ball hit him. Hahn had seen his error. He had squared away to bunt too soon.

This was the game that was held up 20 minutes while the umpires had trouble making up their minds. They finally sent Hahn back to the batter's box.

On the next pitch, Hahn seemed to let and Hodges said: "Nothing wrong with that swing. It was a nice level swing."

Connors takes only pitches and on one spool he can film a double header.

"A good organization man," is how minor league director Joe McDonald describes Connors who does so many jobs for the Mets that he hasn't had time to move his residence from Schenectady, N.Y.

Connors came from the Cubs' Tacoma farm team in 1967. In '68 he was with Jacksonville most of the year and saw nine games when the Mets won all the marbles in '69. He spent most of that year at Tidewater, Va. Last year the Mets asked him to help out as player-coach for Manager Gordie MacKenzie at Pompano Beach, Fla.

He also was the team's trainer and betting practice pitcher and now when the Mets go on the road Connors pitches batting practice.

When the Mets beat Bob Gibson of the Cardinals for the second time this season, they figured Connors and his TV machine might help find the pitching faults of Rich Folkers, a 24-year-old southpaw who in 1967 fanned 120 collegians in 80 innings.

So the Mets sent Connors to Tidewater the day Folkers pitched. The Met brass will study Connors' pictures because they figure Folkers has the stuff to make the big team.

Carbo's Single Lets Cincinnati Drop Pirates 5-4

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bernie Carbo singled in the tie-breaking run in a three-run, seventh inning rally that carried the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday.

Carbo drove home Tony Perez, who had singled, with the run that mapped a 3-0 tie and then Tommy Helms doubled in what proved to be the winning run. Ty Cline had started the inning with a single and eventually crossed the plate on Perez' single.

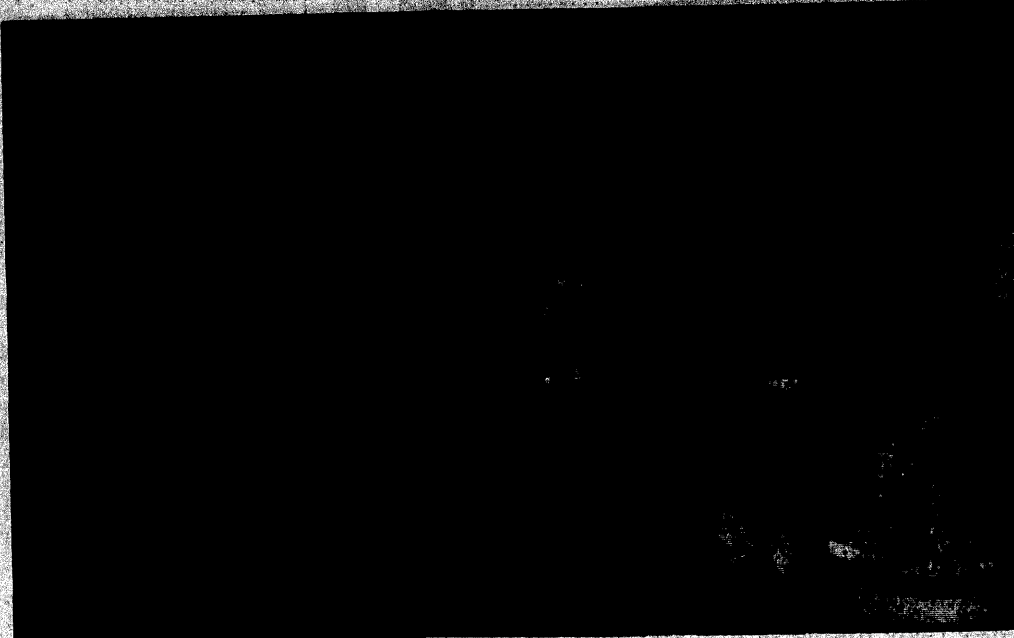

All five Cincinnati runs came off starter Steve Blass, who also yielded 12 hits.

Perez gave the Reds a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a run-scoring single but the Pirates came back in the second to tie it on Bob Robertson's seventh homer of the season.

Helms put the Reds back on top 2-1 in the second with a

Homero Blancas, Knudson Tied At Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Defending champion Homero Blancas and Canadian George Knudson posted early 67s and shared the first-round lead in the $125,000 Colonial National Thursday.

The two tour veterans came in with their three-under-par rounds before the bright, Texas sun sent the temperature soaring into the high 80s and lured a huge gallery to the 7,142-yard Colonial Country Club layout.

They held a one-stroke lead over a trio of non-winning tour regulars, Bert Green and Texan Fred Marti and Jack Montgomery, tied at 68.

A University of Texas freshman, 19-year-old Ben Crenshaw, headed a group at 69, one under par. The others were former PGA champion Dave Stockton, Church Courtney, Jerry Haard and Bert Vancey.

Some of the top candidates for the $25,000 first prize in this prestigious event had their troubles on the tough, hilly layout, however.

Billy Casper, South African Gary Player and rookie Hubert Green, winner of last week's Houston Champions Invitational, all had 73s, well back in the pack.

Powell Charisma Fades Among Bimini Residents

EDITOR'S NOTE—For years Adam Clayton Powell held sway over the tiny Bimini coral islands. He was probably the most important man there, loved and cheered by the natives. A news conference was a momentous event. Now six months after his 23-year career in Congress came to an end, things are different.

By STRATTON DOUTCH
Associated Press Writer
BIMINI, Bahamas (AP) — Sipping a vodka and ginger ale aboard "Adam's Fancy Too," the natty attired skipper of the 40-foot yacht still looked every inch the uncrowned prince of these tiny coral islands. But the appearance was deceiving. Adam Clayton Powell's charisma apparently has faded badly among many of Bimini's 1,200 residents. Two years ago when he called a news conference, natives and newsmen alike would flock to Brown's Hotel to hear Powell. This time—on a Thursday very recently—there were no natives and just two newsmen.

"Why is he calling a news conference?" asked Neville Brown before the Adam's Fancy Too pulled up to the dock in front of Brown's Hotel. "Nobody cares what he says any more. He's done, man." Brown's father owns the hotel. He runs the Bamboo Lounge, one of South Bimini's more popular water spots. Powell, lost his seat in Congress last November.

In the spring and summer of 1967 when the Harlem leader was fighting Congressional censure and a criminal contempt citation in New York, Powell's Bimini followers were legion. They crowded around for a good seat during his news conferences and rooted Powell on as he parried questions with the flippant answers that were his trademark.

This time, Powell was the perfect host. His son, Adam III, invited the two newsmen aboard and Powell held the conference in the yacht's cabin in the presence of his son, his daughter-in-law, former New England socialite Beryl Sloman; his grandson, 4-month-old Adam Clayton Powell IV; and his fiancée, Darlene Karpis, whom he introduced as "Mrs. Powell."

"After you read my announcement, I'm open to all questions," he said.

Although slightly heavy in the jowls, Powell looked fit at 61. The conference was to announce that Powell had authored three books, that he was building a new home on North Bimini, that he would spend part of his time in Washington, and that he was stepping down as pastor of Harlem's giant Abyssinian Baptist Church—the political base upon which he had built his long career in Congress.

In 1967, Powell had to speak over the noise of laughing natives and chatty tourists. This time it was the wailing of Adam IV. Later, walking down South Bimini's only street for a bowl of conch chowder, Powell hailed several natives. They returned the greeting but kept on walking. In the past, he would have stopped a dozen times while exchanging "keep the faith, baby."

Powell has been relaxing on Bimini for 10 years. His popularity peaked in the late 60s when he was in the spotlight.

When he was censured by a House select committee for gross misconduct and required to pay $40,000 in funds the committee said he wrongfully appropriated, they were sympathetic and nodded approvingly when he told a news conference he was being penalized for having "the audacity to act like a white man."

But his image was already showing tarnish when traveling companion Corinne Huff announced she was marrying Powell's boat pilot. Then came the election defeat last year when his Harlem constituency finally turned its back on him after 23 years.

Now, some of the islanders seem almost hostile to Powell. "Did you get what you came for?" Neville Brown asked after Powell and his entourage chugged away for an afternoon of fishing. "Not much, I'll bet. What could he say anybody would care about?"

Another man, whose muscular chest was covered with a tee-shirt bearing the legend "Bonafide Sam," said:

"Everybody used to appreciate Mr. Powell highly when he first came here. 'We would leave our church services to hear him speak. But we've found out he doesn't stand for what we believe in.'"

Women Bowlers Hold Banquet

The annual Jacksonville Women's Bowling Association city banquet was opened Tuesday evening by President Georgia Ann Tribble. Invocation was given by Glennie Dickman. After dinner, sponsors and guests were recognized.

Installation of new officers was performed by Jo Vasconcellos. Installed were Joyce Elliott as the new president and Lee Davis as sergeant-at-arms, each for a three-year term.

Wanda Reynolds, city secretary, called on Joyce Elliott, secretary of the Tuesday Merchant League, to award her trophies and monies to the teams. Bowl Inn team placed highest in the league.

Joyce Elliott, secretary of Thursday Bowlerette League, announced team standings and awarded monies; trophies went to Busch Bavarian team.

Pia-Mer League secretary, Robert McNelly presented her monies and trophies went to the first, second and third place teams. Collins Beauty Shop team was first place winner. Several other special awards were presented.

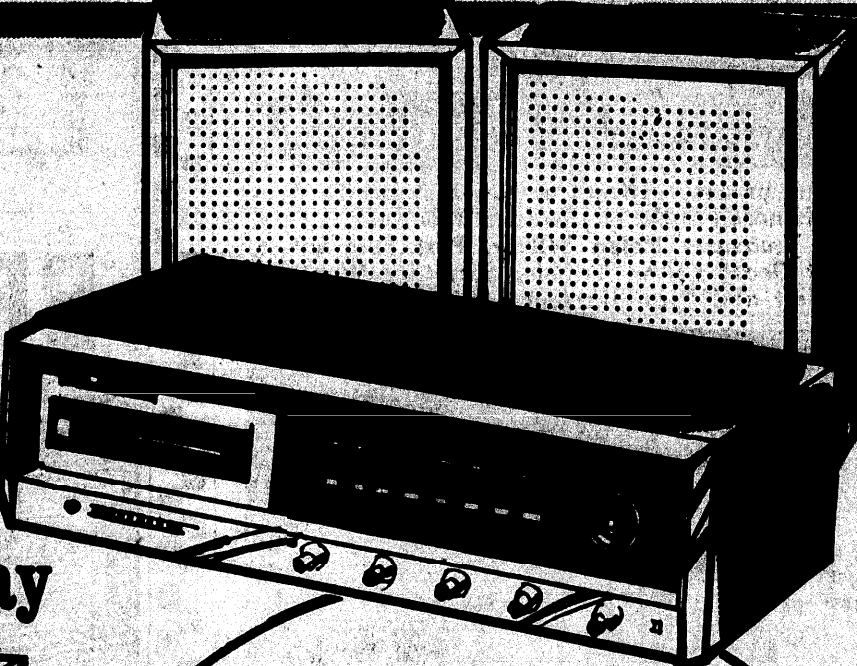

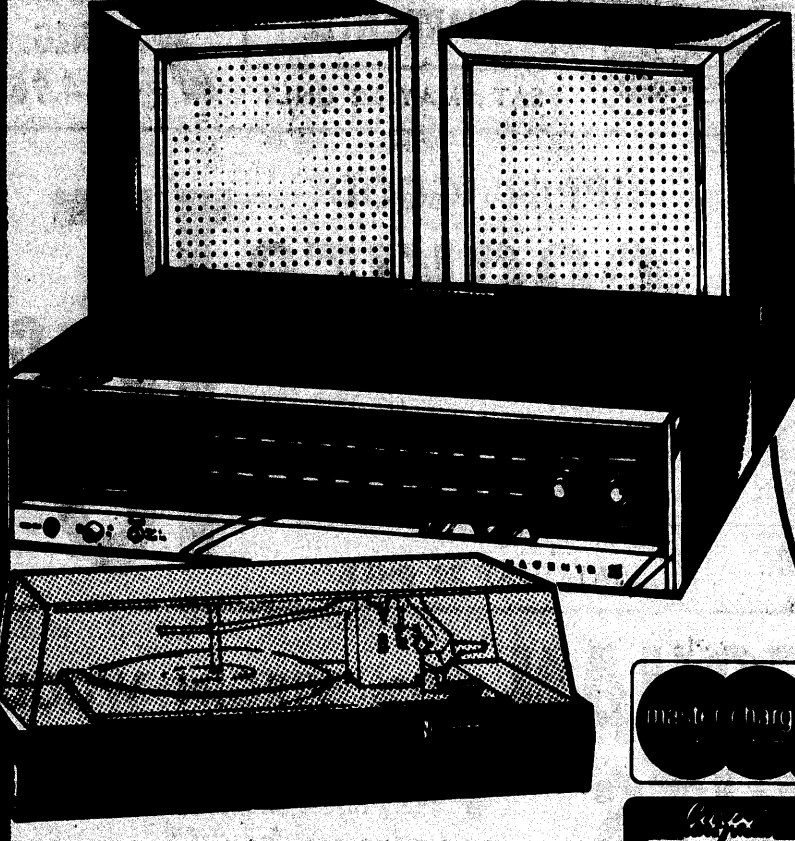

Each league had several girls receiving a 200 pin and also a pin was given to all with perfect attendance.

A floral arrangement was presented to the outgoing president, Georgia Ann Tribble for her services of the past two years. A drawing was held for a second floral arrangement with Paul McGriff the winner.

Aid Conversation With Double Talk

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Now is the time to come to the aid of your conversation with double talk.

This is the art of saying one thing while thinking another. Without the tension-relieving hypocrisy of double talk we'd all bite each other to death instead of trying to talk each other into rigor mortis.

For those who may need a brief brush-up course in double talk, here are a few examples of this vocal art form. The speaker's comment is in quotes, followed by what he is actually thinking.

"I will not stoop to disparage or depreciate my worthy opponent."—He has more mud to throw at me than I have to throw at him.

"That certainly was a soul-stirring sermon you preached on the evils of temptation, Dr. Hardrock."—"I wish he'd quit kicking the hell out of sin and say something cheerful sometime."

"When we get the signal, we simply break right through the police lines. Who do they think they're scaring with those clubs?"—Me!

"Naturally I'm not so old-fashioned as to be against free love, Rodney, but—"Just marry me first, and then you can have all the free love you want."

"You don't have to go into details with me—just tell me how much you really need."—Maybe I can help you think of someone else who will be suckered enough to lend it to you.

"You can't imagine how many times I've thought of you since the last time we met."—You can't imagine something less than nothing.

"These new hot pants you're wearing may get you arrested for arson, Gretchen darling. They could set a man on fire you know."—But only if he's so near-sighted he can't see who's in them.

"I've never met anyone who can make breaded veal cutlets taste just like yours, Blanche."—And I sure do hope my guts keeps up.

"I guess it's time for us to say goodbye for now."—Why not forever?

THE SUTHERLAND SEASON

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Sutherland will sing an operatic heroine she has never portrayed before, during the 1971-72 season, and two she has never before sung in the United States.

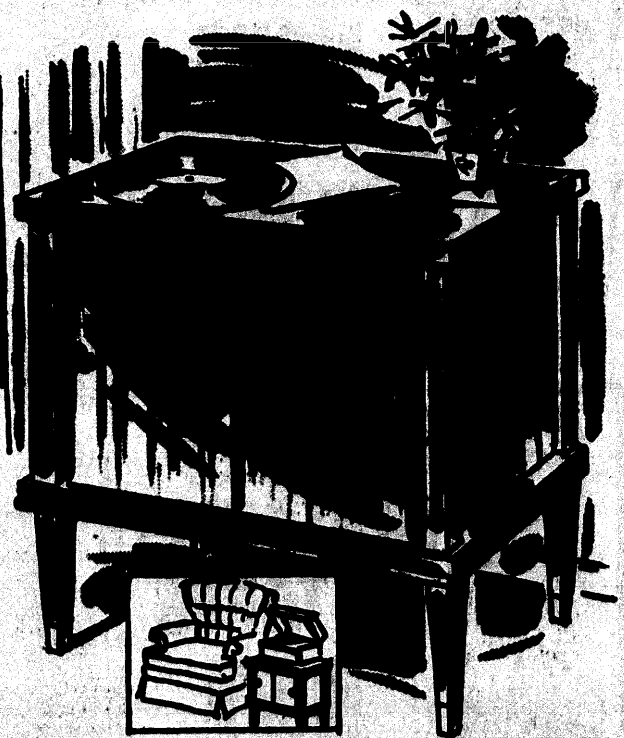

In October she will sing, for the first time, the title role of Donizetti's "Maria Stuarda" in a new production at the San Francisco Opera.

On Feb. 18 she will sing Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment" at the Metropolitan Opera. The Covent Garden production, where she has sung it previously, will be imported by the Met.

Miss Sutherland also will sing Rossini's "Semiramide" with the Chicago Lyric Opera Sept. 24.

In 1970 the United States produced 1½ billion tons of pickles.

Army Offers Enlistees Diverse Career Openings

By PEACE STEERING
AP News Service Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Who in the world can you work for and be anything but a policeman in a museum or a band?

Would you believe—the U.S. Army now, Maj. Robert B. Bort, who is in charge of recruiting for the New York area, now offers an enlistee well over 800 courses from which to choose.

He said that after the Korean War the Army introduced an option allowing an enlistee to go to the location of his choice with the idea of travel and adventure in mind. At the start of the Vietnam war, however, this idea was changed and the Army began concentrating on the career and school options available to enlistees.

"Now we're advertising that an enlistee will receive a guaranteed place in the Army when he chooses," Bort said. "Or, this choice is not left entirely to the enlistee."

"A man first takes a battery of tests to determine what his capabilities are," Bort noted. "After the results are in, a recruiter then will tell the enlistee he's qualified in three or four courses and that he can choose among those options. After he makes that choice, he's programmed for his enlistment date, and a class spot is reserved for him by name."

However, even with the new options, Army recruiting isn't an easy job.

"We have to make sure recruiting is something they can understand," Bort said. "When you're talking about a salary, you're really talking about a man through the Army's eyes. He's got to be honest with his position at all times. If a recruiter gets a man through the Army, he's got to be really quickly," he said, adding that if the Army finds a man has been promised something verbally, it will go to almost any lengths to see he gets it, even if it's not on paper.

Surprisingly enough, Bort has found recruiters are hampered most by fathers of potential enlistees. "I think their fathers remember the Army from World War II," he said. "But then we had a bigger job to do, and I suppose individuals were sacrificed more for the needs of the service."

To make recruiting more palatable, Bort explained, the Army is calling researchers, counselors, or Army representatives. "A recruiter must have an unblemished record with the Army," he said. "And it takes six months to a year of performing his duty before he becomes really proficient."

One such recruiter is Sgt.

Todd Langley, supervisor of recruiting for the Queens area. In the last few months, Langley said, there has been a little change in a lot of attitudes about the Army. In his work, he has found few men with hostile attitudes.

"Each individual has to learn to overcome his hostility," he said. "If a guy comes up, why should I make a job of it. I never met any real hard core nuts, but I met a lot that could have been."

In recruiting Langley said, "You've just got to get in and talk." The way he does this, he explained, is to develop centers of influence in a given area. That means talking to school counselors, state employment people, and Selective Service Boards. "In many cases people are working, so you have to bend your time to fit theirs," he said.

And what's the best kind of publicity, without hesitation, the recruiter answered, "Just like any other business—a satisfied customer."

Camera Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures
One of the major jobs of Photo-Expo '71, recently held in Chicago, was to introduce the newest industry products—cameras, equipment, accessories—to dealers and to the public. Here are some assorted off-beat items that caught the eye in random ramblings around the hall:

Polaroid's "ugly duckling" of a camera, the "Big Shot," an inexpensive, elongated plastic camera which takes only one type of picture: a head-and-shoulders color portrait. Everything is photographed at only one distance (38 inches away), at one fixed speed and with a Magcube flash (no batteries needed). At the end of 60 seconds, a built-in time signal: "Print is ready!" The color prints show large heads and are quite good considering there is nothing to adjust or set on the camera and all you have to do is aim from the right distance.

Speaking of color, Japan's Fuji film efforts are becoming more noticeable in the U.S. To show its capabilities, a display of 50 large Fujicolor flower pictures by Shotaro Akiyama and a set of Fujichrome color slides by Robert Packs, an American photographer, were featured exhibits at Expo. The color renditions were excellent.

A novel multiple-picture-frame-cluster showed how a set of photos can be grouped as a single unit yet are individually framed in overlapping positions. Called "Galerie," and designed by Coda of Englewood, N.J., it holds seven pictures of standard size: a 5 x 7 inch centerpiece with five 3 1/2 x 5 inch and one 3 1/2 inch square photo surrounding it. They are held in place by clear acrylic covers which snap into position and are easily removed to change pictures. It's a handy way to frame a set of related photos such as vacation scenes, party highlights or the most recent series on the children.

Another small novel item is a new slide title kit which enables you to prepare instant 2 x 3 inch slide titles directly if you can write, letter, type or draw. Called "U" Film Title Set, a product of Hudson Photographic Industries of Irvington-on-Hudson, N.Y., it consists of a roll of translucent 35mm film, 100 slip in 35mm slide mounts and a set of color pencils. The film, enough to make 100 titles, can be typed on, written on with ballpoint or felt-tip pen, lead or color pencil or painted with water colors. The completed title is cut from the roll, slipped into a mount and is ready for projection within minutes. The kit is available from audio visual dealers or from the makers.

Burns Rejects Higher Rates On Interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns rejected higher interest rates Wednesday as the way to improve the dollar's world position.

The head of the nation's central bank said a tough anti-inflation fight, complete with direct government intervention in the marketplace to hold down wage and price increases, stands at the top of his list of remedies.

"The overriding need is to restore price stability even as the present slack in our economy is taken up," Burns told the Senate Banking Committee.

Burns broke an official silence following the recent international monetary crisis in which a dollar-guilt in Europe eroded its value in relation to other currencies.

One reason for the crisis was the sharp disparity in interest rates in the United States and Europe. With interest rates lower here, a flood of dollars flowed overseas, causing a wave of speculation and forcing Germany to free its currency from its strings with the dollar. Some other countries revalued their money.

Burns put to rest speculation that the central bank will now pursue a tighter money policy to drive interest rates in the United States higher and put them in line with Europe's.

"The frequently suggested prescription of raising interest rates would not meet our lasting needs at home or abroad," he said.

Back to color prints, Kodak made an interesting announcement: Starting in July, they will introduce a new color copyprint service through local photo dealers. People who have lost or mislabeled color negatives, may have their color prints copied and returned in one of three print sizes: 35 (3 1/2 inches square); 3R (3 1/2 x 5 inch) or rectangular (3 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches). This copy service applies only to non-copyright pictures. Copyrighted material cannot be reproduced without written consent of the copyright holder.

WARD IS CHURCHILL
LONDON (AP) — Simon Ward will play Winston Churchill as a young man in the Carl Foreman-Richard Attenborough production "Young Winston," for Columbia Pictures.

The young actor was chosen because of his remarkable likeness to Churchill at age 19. Eleven others were screen-tested for the part.

The screenplay is based on Churchill's autobiography, "My Early Life." In "Young Winston," Anne Bancroft will play Lady Churchill with Robert Shaw having the part of Lord Randolph Churchill.

Down-the-Road Dugan

Roy "Down-the-Road Dugan" Arling is a quiet, 70-year-old goldminer from Georgetown, Calif.—who admits that the "lust for gold" which brought the Forty-Niners to California is the motive force of his own never-ending search through the same Mother Lode Country. He was given his nickname in the old days, by friends who decided he needed a monicker like those used by the colorful goldminers of the past.

After 50 years of searching, the elderly bachelor's pace has slowed down a bit now. But the desire for one last, big strike keeps him going on his lonely way, traveling around in a dusty old pickup truck, always accompanied by his two dogs.

One Man Campaign Undertaken To Beautify Wide Open Spaces

By EDSON DI FUNGO
SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Despite the fact that this city—the largest industrial center in Latin America—has become an important mass of steel and concrete, at least one Sao Paulo resident has resolved to beautify the nation's remaining open spaces.

"Leave flowers along your way and make Brazil lovelier," is the slogan of a one man campaign undertaken by Armando Cury, publisher of the Brazilian camping magazine, Acampamento.

Cury wants vacationers, hunters, fishermen and campers to carry flower seeds with them wherever they travel and scatter them to the winds—in the mountains, in valleys or along highways. And he has backed up his plan by giving away 70,000 packets of seeds, at a cost of $5,000.

which has a monthly circulation of 30,000.

There was much enthusiasm for the idea, he said, adding that his original worries that hunters and fishermen might think flower planting was a "manicure," quickly were done away with. Cury said he introduced the campaign with a leaflet emphasizing the "spirit of preserving nature."

Cury, a small man in his 40s, got the seeds from a private Brazilian seed company in exchange for free advertising in his magazine. He said it was worth the income loss "to know that within a short while, the Brazilian countryside will be more enjoyable."

Seeds tossed to the wind have a 50 per cent chance of growing into flowers, Cury says, noting that if the traveler actually takes time to plant the seeds the chances for good results increase to 80 per cent.

The flower campaign also awakes interest in city schools here, and children have come to Cury asking for seeds to plant outside their schoolhouses or in public parks.

Cury said he will distribute 10,000 more seed packets later this year.

Each Day A Bonus In Matthau's Life

NEW YORK (AP) — "Each day is a bonus, a free ride to me," said actor Walter Matthau.

"The thing that gives me most pleasure in life today is simply being alive. I had a massive heart attack five years ago that was supposed to kill me but didn't."

"A heart attack is a big insult to your psyche as well as your physiology. I believe mine must have changed my personality—and for the better. Anyway, I've gotten more leading film roles since then."

His latest starring vehicle is a screen version of Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," following smash performances in "The Fortune Cookie," "The Odd Couple," and "Hello, Dolly."

"If you start from nothing and drive yourself to a false fiduciary success, you are almost bound to have a heart attack," he remarked.

His own came after a period during which he overworked, smoked heavily and indulged a passion for spectacular gambling. Now he still works hard but has given up smoking and cut down on his gambling.

"But, of course," he said, smiling, "you can get a heart attack from the strain of standing in line at a $2 window."

Mellowed now by early adversity and illness at the peak of his career, Matthau said now he would define life as "a silly little journey" and his philosophy is this:

"Whatever it is, it isn't that important. Work is more important than the man who does it."

Asked what defeats most men in life, he replied:

"They fall in with all of the philosophy that is made up by the haves. This is not consistent with the needs and desires of the have nots. Whenever the have nots try to apply the philosophy of the haves to their own lives, they come up empty."

Water feels his worst fault is a feeling of nameless guilt.

"I feel terribly guilty. But I don't know what I'm guilty of or why I feel that way."

His best virtue, in his own opinion, is that "I don't take myself too seriously."

155 At Alumni Banquet Held In Roodhouse

ROODHOUSE—Approximately 155 persons attended the Roodhouse Community High School Alumni Banquet Saturday, May 15, at the American Legion Home. Invocation preceding the dinner was offered by Rev. Ervin Harris.

Introducing the 50-year class was a member of the class, attorney Orville Foreman, who was speaker for the evening. Sarah Sheppard introduced the 25-year class.

Conducting the business meeting was the retiring president, Mrs. Deane Bell. Newly elected officers were president, Ray Camp; first vice president, Noel Smith; second vice president, Pat Anthony; treasurer, Helen Wilcox; secretary, Helen Ridings. Serving on the nominating committee were Ronald Martin, chairman; Mrs. George Wollermann, Mrs. Julian Sheppard, Jr.

Vocal music was provided by a trio, Joan McLamar, Carolyn Brant and Mary Muriel Todd, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. H. L. Janvria.

Following the banquet, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Strang, members of the 50-year class, held open house at their home in White Hall. Class members attending were Mrs. Irene Griffiths Wilky, Alton; Mrs. Henrietta Bayle Hakes, Dana; Mrs. Madge Dean Barnes, Godfrey; Martha Fitzpatrick Dreyer, Peoria; Glenn Rodgers, Edmons, Washington.

Others included Mrs. Janet Jones, Seattle, Washington; Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick Hartman, Peoria; Mrs. Helen Grizzle, McNeal, Quincy; Mrs. Teresa Taylor Dennis, John Roodhouse, Sr.; Mrs. Lolita Story Martin, Roodhouse; Orville Foreman, Jacksonville; Mrs. Helen McConathy Everett of White Hall.

At ten a.m. Sunday, the class members and their guests met at the House of Plenty for a breakfast to close the festivities.

News Note

The Della Philaena Class of the First Baptist church met Thursday, May 13, for a potluck supper. A Junior Departmental teacher, Mrs. Bob Vineyard, sang during the program hour. She was accompanied by Mrs. H. L. Janvria at the piano.

Cotonou Is Paris For Some Expatriates

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Associated Press Writer
COTONOU, Dahomey (AP) — The bored Englishman or American, keen for a bit of Gallic excitement and cuisine, flies off from Leeds or Cleveland to Paris.

Other Englishmen and Americans, passing expatriate existences in the former British colonies of Ghana and Nigeria, find Paris somewhat distant. They prefer Cotonou.

The comparison of somnolent, pothered Cotonou (population 120,000) with the Queen of Cities may seem far-fetched.

But after dining out in Accra or Lagos, in pseudo-French or Italian restaurants run by Lebanese or Indians who have never set foot in France or Italy, an Anglo-Saxon gourmet finds Cotonou's Hotel de la Plage a veritable three-star Michelin.

Sitting under the arching palm trees of the Plage's open air restaurant, with the Atlantic surf pounding 30 yards away, scores of weekending visitors devour artichokes (from Paris), Chateaubriand a la Bernaise (from Paris), petite pots and lettuce (from Paris) and a good French wine. Followed by a plate of cheeses and a bowl of apples and pears (also from Paris).

When it comes, the bill might as well be from Paris, too.

While the English decolonized Nigeria and Ghana and left them both to run their own affairs, the colonial French granted political independence to places like Dahomey, but then stayed on.

All over former French West Africa one finds Frenchmen running patisseries, hotels, sports and clothes shops, garages and grocery stores. In the Ivory Coast, which has a French population of 40,000, one finds French hairdressers, masseurs, prostitutes, bartenders and at least one French valet—that of President Felix Houphouet-Boigny.

With so many Frenchmen—and given the French belief that good eating is a serious undertaking—there is little wonder that an improbable place like Cotonou has become a watering spot for the hardy Anglo-Saxons.

Just as they fly in their lettuce and their cheeses, the 4,000-odd Frenchmen here insist on importing the latest fashions from the Metropolis.

Even the most leathery, malaria-ridden ancien colon, an expelled veteran of Algeria and Guinea, will be attired in tight-fitting, wide-belted pants and body-hugging shiny shirt. And his wife likewise, with appropriate feminine variations.

"But most of this stuff is for the Anglo-Saxons from Lagos," observed one French boutique owner, who has been here for 20 years. "It's lucky you're here at the beginning of the weekend, by the end it's all sold."

Most weekenders come by road from Lagos, usually a four-hour trip. (Ghana Anglo-Saxons sometimes prefer to stop in Cotonou's smaller twin, Lome, capital of the neighboring mini-nation of Togo.) The trip can be longer, much longer, if the Nigerian customs officials decide to be sticky—that is, greedy.

However, the ubiquitous West African petty bribe can usually expedite things at the border, transforming probing frowns into appreciative grins.

Once inside Cotonou, the Anglo-Saxon men begin signing traveler's cheques while the womenfolk make a beeline for the shops.

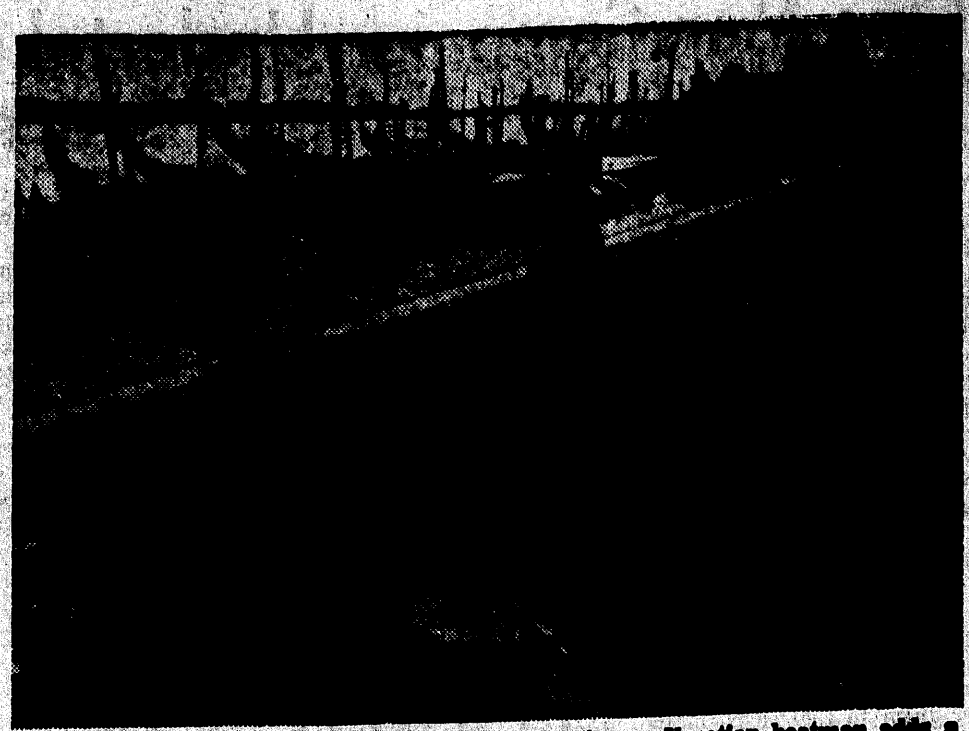

But, in truth, once one has had one's fill of the restaurants and the shops (loading up on certain canned goods not available in Lagos or Accra), there is not much to do in Cotonou.

The only architectural monument in town is the ghastly $8.5

million presidential palace, whose construction in 1963 helped provoke the first of Dahomey's five coups d'etat.

One can visit a pleasant fishing village on stilts, Ganvie, a few miles from Cotonou. Or play tennis at the Club du Benin.

But, when all is said and done, Paris is probably nicer.

GETTING READY for the annual tourist invasion, a Venetian boatman adds a touch of paint to his dismantled gondola.

Experts Say Brides Are Really Beautiful

By AP Newsfeatures
NEW YORK (AP) — "What a beautiful bride!"

Since the first "I do," millions of wedding onlookers have sighed that phrase. In defiance of logic, there seem to be more beautiful brides than beautiful brides-to-be. Even the noted plastic surgeon, Dr. Maxwell Maliz, agrees that a girl of average appearance "will look prettier" on the way to the altar.

Is the beautiful bride a figment of many imaginations? Hypercritical photographers don't think so, according to the Bridal and Bridesmaids Apparel Association. Bradford Bachrach studio asserts, "The girls we see as brides bear out the truth of the statement that 'brides are beautiful!'" Philippe Halsman agrees. So does Peter Basch.

Photographer-educator Ralph Hattersley, goes a step further: "I've noticed," he says, "that even girls who have lived with their men before marriage also look especially beautiful on their wedding day, though one might suppose they wouldn't... the idea of marriage does something special to their looks."

What's the reason for this phenomenon? Psychiatrists and psychologists have varied explanations. Dr. Martin S. Livingston believes that brides "have evidence that they are worthy of love, that they are lovable. People are attractive when they feel they are lovable and worthwhile." Dr. Eleanor Hamilton says, "all people who love radiate out an inner beauty. The saying that all the world loves a lover is a see-able fact."

Pioneer hypnotherapist, Dr. Abram Weinberg, thinks the bride's beauty is related to expectancy. "She represents all brides since the first one. She represents all womanhood. It is the expectancy she brings with her: 'the expectancy of femininity, of womanhood' that shines through in beauty. 'It is also the expectancy of the people who are there; the beautiful setting, the flowers, the music, the bridal gown. All these put you in the mood of expecting her to be beautiful,' says the psychiatrist."

Dr. Weinberg also believes there's a physical basis for the bride's beauty. "In the excitement, blood flows to the face, there is increased outpouring of adrenalin, and the glow in her face reflects these organic, physiological changes."

Basch, a specialist in photographing women, believes happiness is "very visual" and the bride reflects this happiness in her face. It imbues someone who may not be photogenic, he says, "with a kind of beauty. It may be inner beauty. But it is visible." Dr. Edrita Fried, a psychotherapist, simplifies this to: "The soul makes the look."

According to Father John McVean of St. Francis of Assisi Monastery & Church, "The love that the bride expresses towards her husband in the ceremony contributes to her beauty in the eyes of the beholder."

The bride's feeling contributes to her beauty, says psychotherapist Helen T. Grand, but there "is something about a bridal gown and headpiece itself that would enhance anybody." The bride thinks, "I'm going to get dressed up like a princess while everybody else remains in the realm of the ordinary," says the psychotherapist. "When you think of a beautiful bride, you don't think of one in street clothes standing before the Justice of the Peace," Dr. Grand stated.

Psychiatrist Albert Baynton-dorp has a different idea. "What makes the bride beautiful? The groom, I guess!"

Study Indicates Pill May Deter Breast Lumps

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A two-year study of 230 women taking birth control pills indicates the pills do not cause breast cancer and may even deter breast lumps, a British doctor says.

Dr. Martin P. Vessey, lecturer in epidemiology at Oxford University told an American Cancer Society conference on breast cancer Monday.

"No evidence has been found so far that oral contraceptives are associated with an increased risk of breast neoplasia (tumors). Indeed, these preliminary data suggest that the preparations tend to protect against the development of benign (noncancerous) lesions."

Women admitted to five London hospitals with breast lumps were interviewed by Vessey and two other researchers from Dec. 1, 1968, until last Dec. 31, he said. Fifty-four patients had cancerous tumors and 168 had benign tumors, and for each patient with breast lumps, a patient admitted for other reasons was studied.

Vessey said the research seemed to indicate that birth control pills do not cause cancer.

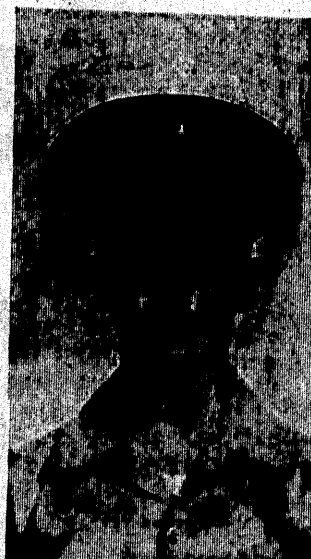

"The number of patients is small, but they provide some evidence that oral contraceptives may protect against benign breast disease," he said.

However, Dr. Edward F. Lewison of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore said certain women should not take birth control pills.

He noted a long association of high estrogen levels with development of breast lumps in animals and humans and said about 300,000 women will get breast cancer in the next five years.

High-risk groups he cautioned against using the pill include women with a family history of breast cancer, women who have had cancer of one breast or recurrent noncancerous breast lumps and women with suspicious breast X-rays.

Mrs. Find It Locates Objects For Films

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—A new interest, a new life. I think I went from a tailor to a door. Mrs. Crosby, 34, answered an ad and got a job with a film production company. After two years, she says, "I looked for a vulnerable spot in the industry and jumped in."

The result is "Mary Crosby the Coordinator," the name of her firm. Her specialty is locating things, and people, needed by film production firms—mostly makers of commercials. It pays off, she says, at about $25,000 a year.

It took her three days, but she found a New England barn needed for a scene. It was in farm country north of here.

When Universal Pictures asked her for an up-to-date film of the San Diego skyline, including the new Coronado Bay Bridge, she dug around and found allides that filled the bill.

A plastic baby bottle shaped like a woman? No luck... so she had one made.

A hamburger chain wanted a six-foot flying hamburger for a commercial. She had one built of wood, then rigged it with wires so it would appear to soar. The same firm wanted a burger-eater to munch away as she sank slowly into cement.

Mrs. Crosby found a contractor who dug a hole and filled it with water and sawdust, after which a pulley slowly lowered the eater. She even found seven copies of his clown outfit to sub for those drenched during retakes.

For an auto firm, she provided the chickens that flew out of the trunk when a paunchy sheriff lifted the lid.

She has worked up a talent list of 800 local people ranging from month-old babies to a man of 92 to appear in still photos and films. For a Debbie Reynolds TV special she found 1,638 children, wardrobes, props, permits and a location site.

San Diego is popular with makers of commercials and advertising stills because it is sunny, usually amog free, and is near beaches, mountains and Mexico. Hollywood is minutes away by plane.

Finding things often is easy, she says, because "when you ask anyone for help, they usually will."

"What was difficult," she says of her new life, "was getting out into the business world after 10 years as a housewife and never having worked a day in my life. I was scared out of my mind."

Now she believes her relationship with her children—ages 10 to 12—is "better by our not being together all the time. They understand I'm a human being and I respect them as individuals. I loved being a housewife and I really dig my kids, but fate put me in an office for a very good reason. I needed it and it needed me."

Her next project? Writing a book. She already has a title, "So What Now, or How to Be a Widow."

The theme, she says, is that "a beginning follows every end."

The Cheyenne Mountain Zoo in Colorado is 6,800 feet above sea level.

Gov. Ogilvie Plans Public Aid Reform

By MICHAEL ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) —

Calling the present Illinois welfare system "a human outrage and a fiscal monster," Gov. Richard D. Ogilvie proposed today a major public aid overhaul based on "the old-fashioned notion of working for a living."

"The welfare system consumes all the best of our talent — moral, fiscal, administrative and legal," Ogilvie said in a message on welfare reform before a joint session of the House and Senate.

The message drew resounding applause, at times from both sides of the aisle, although Democrats later voiced reservations about Ogilvie's tough, no-work proposal.

Under the plan, persons on welfare who presently get their check in the mail would pick it up once a month at a state employment office, where they also would review prospects for work with a job counselor.

"We hereby serve notice that any recipient who refuses work will be summarily denied further benefits," Ogilvie said. "Similar programs are pending in New York and California."

Other features of Ogilvie's plan include a substantial reshaping of general assistance, which he called "the least of active and most abused welfare programs," tighter machinery to curb fraud, more state and local government jobs for those on relief and a cutback in the cost to the state of medical aid.

Ogilvie warned that the sky-rocketing "demands of welfare are producing a crisis in Illinois state financing which is every bit as serious as the crisis which led to passage of the (state) income tax."

He said the welfare budget has increased about 30 per cent in each of the last two years and will exceed $1.1 billion in fiscal 1972, double the amount of three years ago. It could go higher than $1.5 billion, he warned.

The governor's welfare budget for fiscal 1972 is based on the belief that Congress will pass President Nixon's family assistance plan, or some similar measure, giving the state $60 million in federal public aid funds that it now gets.

Nothing that and that "the funds are not yet assured," Ogilvie observed that Illinois is "faced with the prospect of a budget badly out of balance."

The governor gave a bit more than a hint of his priorities if reductions in the budget are necessary.

"We must not be pushed into grant cuts until the last possible moment," Ogilvie said. "If cuts must be made, they should first be made in services such as Medicaid which are of least direct impact upon those in need." Ogilvie said his must-work proposal reflects no "conclusion on my part that welfare recipients are less inclined to work than are other members of our society."

"The program, instead, stems from my conviction that so much needs to be done in our society that every able-bodied citizen should be hard at work," he said.

He detailed a program under which applicants for welfare would be screened for employability before they are given aid. Regular efforts will be made to place those on the rolls in jobs.

Ogilvie said able-bodied men should be put to work by the state and local governments cleaning lakes and waterways, removing rubbish, and providing protection in the parks. Recipients also would be given jobs in hospitals, nursing homes and child care centers.

Medicaid patients would be asked to make a token payment for services, which would be deducted from the bill the doctor or hospital sends the state. Ogilvie gave this schedule:

—$1 for each visit to a doctor, dentist or other health provider.
—$1 for each prescription for a pair of eyeglasses.
—$3 for each day of a hospital stay.

Applicants on welfare would be asked to prove their need before receiving money. Ogilvie said he believes the screening process "should require more than the potentially self-serving statement of an unknown person walking in off the street."

He said, however, that the screening can be simplified as can the rest of the application. In fact, he said, the state may be losing $30 million a year in federal matching funds because of Cook County welfare workers who place poor people on state-funded federal assistance rather than a federal program for which they are eligible.

He threatened to suspend caseworkers who continue the practice. Ogilvie drew gasps from the Democratic side of the aisle when he announced that the Department of public aid would immediately begin hiring 800 more caseworkers and "para-professionals" to implement the program of providing more jobs for the poor.

Demos Skeptical About Welfare Plan

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — While Republicans applauded Gov. Richard Ogilvie's proposal for major welfare overhaul Thursday, Democrats questioned how the GOP leader could save money by hiring 800 more state employees to carry out his plan.

Lt. Gov. Paul Simon said he could "agree with portions" of Ogilvie's message, but said "I don't think you're going to save money by adding 800 people to the payroll."

Simon referred to a statement Ogilvie made in his address to a joint session of the Illinois House and Senate. The governor said: "I have requested the budget for the Department of Public Aid 800 new positions for the coming fiscal year. And I have instructed the department to begin filling those positions immediately."

In his message, Ogilvie called for more stringent controls over who gets public aid, demanded that welfare recipients work if able, and renewed a plea for federal welfare reform.

While Ogilvie said welfare is a "human outrage and a fiscal monster which robs the poor of their dignity and the taxpayers of their hard-earned dollars," Democrats said the governor makes his spending cutbacks in the "human areas."

"It is interesting to note that the governor mentions only the human areas of mental health, children and family services, and corrections as places where cuts may be made in his budget. There are many other places in his well-financed bureaucracy that could stand being cut back," a prepared statement from Democratic legislative leaders said.

And while the governor said he has no change in "founded on the old-fashioned notion of working for a living," The Democratic leadership said the cause of the "welfare crisis" is the result of rising unemployment.

"The governor talked today about the crisis in welfare, and possible cure, but he said nothing about the cause. The cause is simply that under our present national administration people have not been able to find jobs."

"Unemployment has climbed to 6.1 per cent of the labor force, skilled and unskilled workers alike are hunting jobs and their only recourse has been to go on welfare when their unemployment compensation has run out," Democrats said.

But House Speaker Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, said Ogilvie's welfare reform proposal is a "realistic and positive approach toward solving one of the major problems facing the state today."

"The leadership in the House will do its part in helping to implement and innovate this bold new program, for the benefit of all the people in Illinois," Blair said.

GREENE HEALTH BOARD MEETS

CARROLLTON — The Board of the Greene County Health Department met in regular session Tuesday May 18. The meeting was called to order by president, Roy Shoemaker with the following in attendance: Mrs. Ruth Edwards, Dr. Paul Dailley, Dr. Dean Langer, Dr. Robert Piper and Mr. Arnold Hyde, Secretary. Also attending were staff members, Elizabeth Field, R.N., Betty Hyde, secretary, and Barbara Cook, R.N.

A contract to provide nurses aide service to qualifying patients was approved. Medical policies and agency expenditures were reviewed and procedures for re-evaluation and re-certification of the agency were discussed.

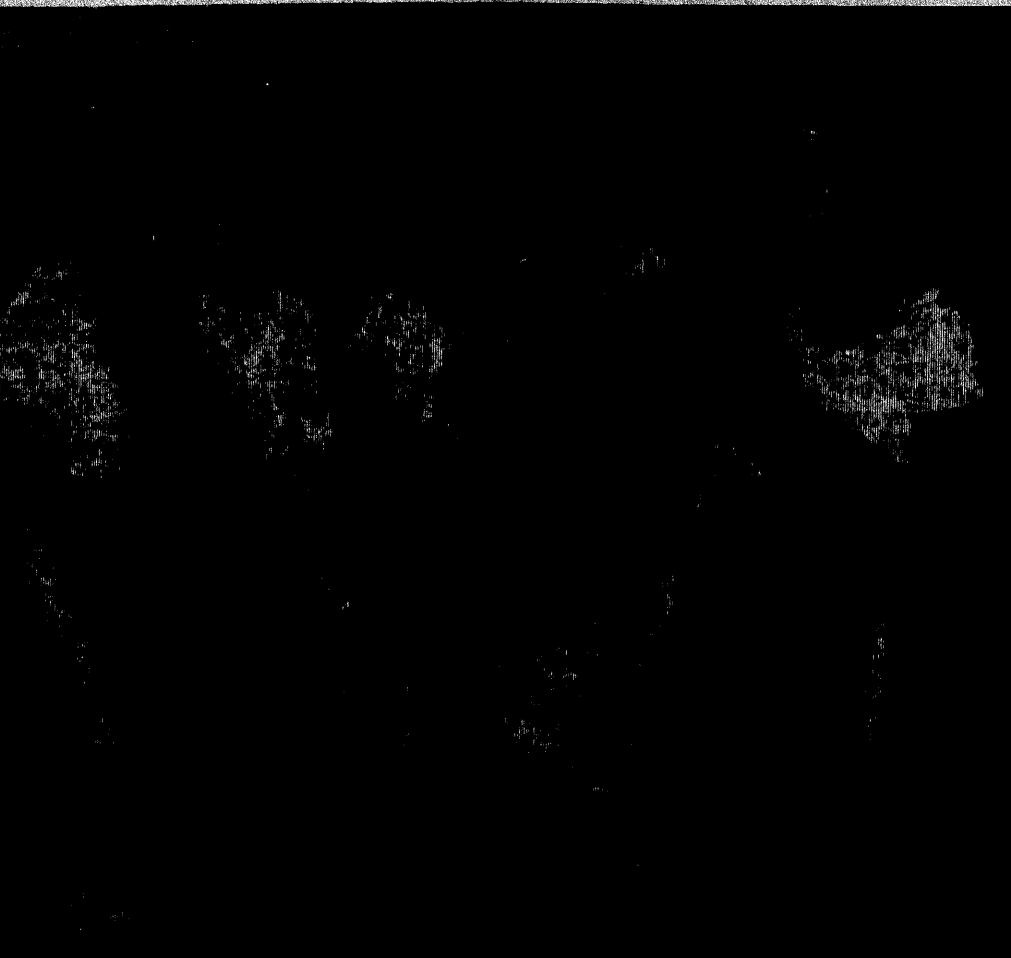

It was reported that 221 visits were made by Health Department nurses during April.

The meeting was adjourned with date for next meeting to be June 15.

Safety Lane Total Nears 4,000 Mark

Eight hundred and eighty one vehicles passed through Jacksonville's Safety Lane Thursday but the prospects of reaching the 4,000 vehicle goal seem dim. Yesterday's inspections brought the four-day total to 3,915 vehicles checked.

The Safety Lane will be open from 9 a.m. to noon today. The shorter hours were caused by an event planned in the Safety Lane area today which necessitated the opening of Morgan St. to traffic.

The shorter hours today and the cancellation of the traditional "sneak preview" last Sunday due to rain kept total vehicle inspections lower than in past years.

Fleets of cars and trucks checked at the lane Thursday included those owned by: AEC Fire Department Equipment, Pepsi Cola Bottling Co., General Telephone Co., Glisson Motor Co., Miles Used Cars, Sunny Slope Kennels, Friendly Cab Co., Ace Hardware, Rid-A-Pest Control, Olson Cleaners, Charles Todd Rental, Williamson Funeral Home, United Parcel Service, Hess Tire Co., Cox Buick-Pontiac, Kimbler TV Service.

Fifty-two vehicles were rejected, mainly for faulty turn signals and headlights. Of those rejected, 31 returned to get the "Circle of Safety."

Assisting in the operation of the Safety Lane Thursday were: the Rotary Club, Jacksonville High School students, the Group for Auto Safety, mechanics from Cox Buick-Pontiac and Byers Brothers International Trucks, Morgan County Sheriff's Dept., Jacksonville Police Dept., Illinois State Police, Boy Scout Troop 113 and personnel of the Secretary of State's office.

While proponents numbered less than 70 on the tally board at the start of the debate they climbed finally to 88 as sponsors wheedled support by citing that May was Tavern Month. Passage required 80. The no vote was 46.

"Now is the time to pull the teeth of the dram shop act and to rewrite a portion of it," said the chief sponsor, Rep. William J. Cunningham, R-Pinckneyville. He said the Illinois dram shop act was the most stringent in the nation.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Chicago, warned Cunningham and the tavern owners they were abandoning a $35,000 certain limit on their liability in each case, and risking judgments for personal injury or property damage that could reach $150,000.

Rep. Roscoe Cunningham, R-Lavacoreville, called the bill "overkill."

He said the House nearly a month ago sent to the Senate a bill that changes the standard for determining liability from "having caused the intoxication in whole or in part" to "having caused the intoxication."

Under present law, William Cunningham said, not only is any tavern keeper liable if he sold one drink to a person causing injury or damage, but the premises may be held without notice or defense.

Hyde warned, "I submit that if you repeal the dram shop act the court will be willing to find that the last tavern owner was negligent."

But Rep. Daniel Pierce, D-Highland, replied that tavern owners are willing to risk liability for negligence.

"They don't wish to be liable without fault," Pierce said. "And if we go back the negligence under the common law, the injured party will be able to recover his true loss," without the $35,000 limit.

Tavern owners have complained, proponents have said, that the present dram shop law puts burdens on all tavern owners that causes their insurance rates to rise unduly.

WINCHESTER — Graveside rites for Bruce Burrows will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sunday at the Winchester City cemetery with Rev. David Deal officiating.

Mr. Burrows died at his residence in Chandler, Ariz. on April 7. Funeral services were held at Chandler April 10.

Mr. Burrows was born in Scott County May 7, 1932, the son of Edward and Annie Marquette Burrows. He married Allie Yates on Aug. 9, 1954 at Payson, Ill.

He is survived by his wife and a brother, Claude Burrows, of Quincy. Two sisters and one brother preceded him in death.

Mr. Burrows was a member of the Winchester United Methodist church; a past road district commissioner, serving 27 years in district 4; and a WWI veteran.

The Cunningham Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Virginia Man Dies From Gunshot Wound

VIRGINIA — Clarence Henry Sweeten, 65, of Virginia, was pronounced dead at 11:55 p.m. Thursday by Cass County Coroner Richard Pugh. Death was attributed to a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Mr. Sweeten had been in ill health for some time, and has been retired from his work on the railroad for the past year because of that condition.

An inquest will be held at a later date.

Mr. Sweeten was born Sept. 30, 1905 in Perry, Okla., the son of Henry and Louise Meyer Sweeten. He is survived by his wife, Della Brunk Sweeten, of Virginia, and a brother, George, also of Virginia.

Several nieces and nephews also survive.

The body was taken to the Massie Funeral Home where the family will meet friends from 7-9 p.m. this evening. Services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the funeral home with Rev. Herbert Bouey officiating. Burial will be in the Walnut Ridge cemetery.

Janice Moore Girl's Stater From Winchester

By Mrs. James Cox (Winchester Correspondent) (Telephone 743-3517)
WINCHESTER — The American Legion Auxiliary Post No. 442 has named Janice Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Moore, to represent them at Girls State, June 15 through 22, at MacMurray College in Jacksonville.

Janice is a junior at Winchester High School. She is an active member of the Student Council, GAA, French Club and Math Club, was a member of the Junior-Senior play cast and served as vice-president of her class her freshman year.

Janice is a member of the First Baptist church and is secretary of the BYF.

Charilyn Hornbeek, daughter of Mrs. Shirley Hornbeek, was named as alternate.

Baccalaureate services for the 1971 graduating class of the Winchester High School will be held at 8 p.m. Sunday in the high school auditorium. The processional will be played by Grace Ellen McEvers.

Rev. Harold George, pastor of Assembly of God church, will present the message, "What I Would do If I Were A High School Graduate."

Rev. James Organ, pastor of First Christian church, will give the invocation; Rev. A. D. LeBreton, St. Mark's church, will give the scripture reading; and Rev. Maynard Aden, First Baptist pastor, will have the benediction.

A mixed chorus will sing "Amazing Grace."

Commencement exercises are scheduled for May 28 at 8 p.m. at the high school.

Spring Concert

The Winchester High School Band and Chorus will present a Spring Concert tonight at the high school at 7:30 p.m.

The public is most cordially invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

Dawdy WMS Meets

The Lucille Dawdy WMS of Grace Baptist church met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Frank Boston with Mrs. George Cain as assistant hostess.

Mrs. Walker Stinebaker gave the call to prayer. Mrs. Gayle McEvers was in charge of the lesson with Mrs. George Cain, Mrs. Ed Dawdy, Mrs. Walker Stinebaker, and Mrs. Frank Boston taking part.

Mrs. Dawdy, president, conducted the business meeting. The group received a letter for volunteer help at the new nursing center. They decided to make the 24"x24" hemmed squares for the center that they were requesting.

Those attending were Mrs. McEvers, Mrs. Stinebaker, Mrs. Dawdy, Emma Hill, Mrs. Mary Copley, Mrs. Clark Bailey, Mrs. Cain, and the hostess. Guests were Mrs. Minnie Hardy and Mrs. Richard Dawdy.

The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mary Copley with Mrs. Herb Brown assisting.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stephens returned to their home in Cincinnati after spending two weeks visiting her sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Montgomery, and daily visits with her mother, Mrs. Carrie Townsend at Melrose Nursing Center in Jacksonville.

Wednesday afternoon visitors of Mrs. Ed Gant were Mrs. Nancy McKinnon and Mrs. Myrtia Capps of Pleasant Hill, and Mrs. Judy Cramer of Pittsfield.

DRIVER TICKETED AFTER ACCIDENT

William E. McGrane, 62, of 405 Westgate, was ticketed for improper lane usage after his car hit two parked autos in the 800 block of West College at 5:14 p.m. Thursday.

City police officers said the McGrane car struck autos parked by Harold B. Stansfield of 9 Open Road and E. McDonald, 20, of Concord.

MacMurray To Grant 170 Degrees Sunday

The conferring of degrees to 170 students, the annual Alumnae Luncheon and reunion meetings of nine alumnae classes, and more than 30 other events for parents and campus guests will comprise Commencement weekend activities at MacMurray College.

A special reception program in the Main Hall social room will begin Saturday's activities of interest to the general public. The 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. open house will feature the unveiling of figurines depicting prominent women in the history of the college, which were prepared by Miss Janette C. Powell of Jacksonville.

More than 250 alumnae are expected to attend the Alumnae Luncheon at noon in the Irma Latzer Gamble Campus Center. The highlight of the program will be the presentation of the Alumnae of the Year Award by MacMurray President John J. Wittich.

Immediately following the luncheon will be a tree planting ceremony conducted by Mrs. P. J. Davidmeyer of Jacksonville, who is chairman of the college's Committee on Landscaping.

Reunion meetings for the classes of 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942 and 1943 will be held on the campus and in local homes Saturday afternoon. Jacksonville women in charge of arrangements for reunion meetings are Mrs. John

S. May, Miss Louise Sheppard, Mrs. J. Pryor Bossart and Mrs. Charles Bowen.

The annual Commencement Recital program, given by five senior music students, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Annie Merner Chapel.

A highlight of the entire weekend schedule, a seminar concerning "Today's Challenges to the Rule of Law," will be held at 8 p.m. in Bailey Auditorium in the college's Chemistry Building. Panelists for the seminar will be Dr. Patricia Roberts Harris, Washington, D.C. attorney and former dean and professor of law at Howard University; Judge John T. Reardon of Quincy, Chief Judge of the Eighth Judicial Circuit of Illinois; and Judge Paul C. Reardon, associate justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

William L. Fay, Jacksonville attorney and recent delegate to the Illinois Constitutional Convention, will serve as the panel moderator.

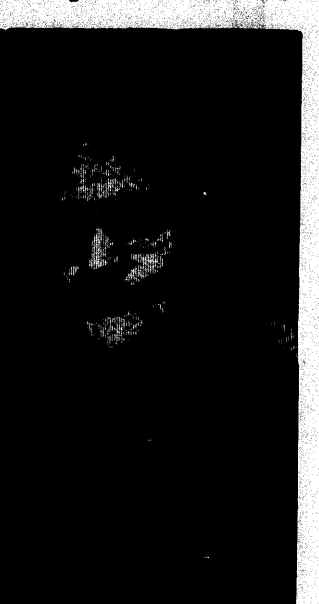

Sunday's Commencement exercises will be held at 10 a.m. in Annie Merner Chapel. Judge Paul C. Reardon will deliver the address.

Four persons will receive honorary doctoral degrees during the ceremony: Judge Reardon, Dr. Harris, Dr. Judith H. Marston of Scottsdale, Ariz., and Rev. Robert S. White of Galesburg.

Local AWD, Auxiliary Guests

Brent Samuels

Mrs. Burriell Rodde

The annual Gold Star banquet, given by the local chapter of the American War Dads and Auxiliary was held Tuesday evening, May 11th, at the Masonic Temple. Invitations were sent all Gold Star parents of Macopa County, with seventeen attending.

National colors were advanced by War Dad Wm. Fanning, who led the pledge of allegiance to the flag. All sang "God Bless America," after which War Dad Ben Roddehouse gave the invocation.

After the banquet, served by the DeMolays, John Chambers, a local War Dad, took charge as Master of ceremonies. He called on Mayor Dan Lahey for greetings to the out of town guests and the Gold Star parents.

Mrs. Robert Mawson, with Mrs. Clyde Cooper accompanist, favored the group with several vocal numbers.

Rev. Wm. Stadden of Springfield gave an interesting message on his experiences in the war East.

A number of past National Presidents of the War Dads and Auxiliary were present as well.

Mac Student Awarded State Fellowship

Michael K. Grogan of East Hazelcrest, Ill., a sophomore pre-law major at MacMurray College, has been awarded a 1971 summer fellowship in state government, sponsored by Governor Richard B. Ogilvie.

Thirty-five outstanding college students were selected for the program from among more than 800 applicants.

Grogan, a 1969 graduate of Mendel Catholic High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Grogan, 17228 Country Lane in East Hazelcrest.

Through the governor's Summer Fellowship Program, college students get a first-hand experience of how their state government works. They will be involved in many areas of governmental activity, as well as special seminars and field trips to state institutions.

Fellowship interns will work directly with agency directors or their top assistants who administer existing programs or they may help in the development and implementation of new programs.

Grogan will be working for the Department of Local Governments.
